Sweeping Orders Due On Service Unification

First May Direct Consolidation of All Sea Transport Under Navy Control

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A series of sweeping military reorganization orders will follow passage of the service unification bill, approved yesterday by the House.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson revealed—immediately after the House completed legislative action on the long-pending measure—that "10 or 12" orders to further unify the armed forces soon will be issued.

What may be the first of them was announced late yesterday at the Pentagon—a directive consolidating all military sea transport under Navy control. The Army will begin to transfer all its ocean-going transports, cargo ships and tankers to the new Military Sea Transport Service, on Oct. 1.

Indorsed 356 to 7

The unification bill—which vests unprecedented powers in the Secretary of Defense—was indorsed 356 to 7 yesterday in the House. A conference report embodying the final version of the much amended and long debated bill was passed and sent to the White House. President Truman's signature is assured.

This action was viewed as paving the way for early consideration of the military pay bill. Senate consideration of the latter had been delayed until the unification bill was passed. Supporters of the latter predict large savings will be made to offset the additional 300 million dollars a year in salary boosts.

Some Doubts Expressed

Despite the overwhelming vote in favor of the unification bill, some doubts were expressed by supporters yesterday as to the wisdom of the action. And Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, who played a prominent role in writing the measure, stressed some of the checkreins imposed on Johnson in his speech asking House approval.

Provisions of the measure:

(1) It creates a Department of Defense, composed of the Army, Navy, Air Force and several boards and agencies. The Departments of Army, Navy and Air Force are reduced from the status of "executive" to that of "military" departments.

(2) Johnson, as Secretary of Defense, gains sole responsibility for the "direction, authority and con-

Murphy's Net Estate Here Totals $600

The late Justice Frank Murphy of the Supreme Court left a net estate of $600 in the District in addition to interests he may have held elsewhere, it was disclosed yesterday.

In District Court papers, his assets locally were listed as $100 in personal effects and $2100 in a bank account. He owes $1600 to the Washington Hotel where he lived ,the court was told.

A petition was filed for ancillary letters of administration in the Murphy estate by his brother, George Murphy.

It was announced earlier that Justice Murphy left a "small" estate in Michigan, He died July 19 in Detroit without leaving a will.

His survivors who may share in the estate are his brother, George Murphy, a sister, Mrs. Marguerite M. Teahan and a niece, Sharon Murphy. All three reside in Michigan.

Federal Aid To Education Dies in House

'Hot Potato' Is Tossed Around in Committee But Result Is No Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

In two hours of stormy wrangling yesterday the House Education and Labor Committee tossed its political hot potato—the Federal aid to education measure—back and forth but wound up right where it started—with no bill.

Another meeting has been scheduled for Thursday but both Republicans and Democrats privately admit the whole question of Federal aid to education is dead for this session.

The issue not only has touched off a Nation-wide religious controversy but it has also intensified a smoldering North-South controvery over the location of Northern industrial plants tax-free in Southern States.

Provisions of Bill

After the fruitless meeting yesterday, Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.) introduced a compromise measure, aimed at breaking the religious deadlock over the bill.

Kennedy's bill would provide 300 million dollars of Federal money to the States for current educational expenses of the schooi system.

A second title of the bill would set aside 10 per cent of each State's allotment for auxiliary school services such as bus rides, health aides and State-approved non-religious textbooks, and would provide that these go to private and parochial school children as well as to those in public schools.

Funds Distributed

The funds under Title II would be distributed through State educational authorities wherever State constitutions permit. Otherwise these funds would be made available by the Federal Government in a pro rata pattern similar to that in use under the National School Lunch Act.

"An important new provision of this measure," Kennedy said, "prohibits the Federal Government from disbursing funds directly to private or parochial schools, but makes it possible for the government to enter into contracts with these schools to reimburse them for 50 per cent of their actual expenses incurred in supplying these services."

He pointed out that the Supreme Court has ruled that it does not

D. C. Deluged In Spots by Dilatory Cloud

A thundercloud moving with snail-like slowness dumped up to 2½ inches of rain on spots in Northwest Washington and the Takoma Park area in two hours yesterday.

Most other sections of the city got light showers, or none at all.

Results of the downpour in some places were flooded streets and cellars, immobilized traffic, and sharp warnings from the Fire Department to residents to turn off gas pilot lights and electrical appliances in flooded basements to avoid danger of explosion.

Small Belt Drenched

The small belt which was hardest hit by the downpour included the Brightwood, Takoma Park, and Brookside Manor areas. In the Eight Police Precinct in the northwest section, in Chevy Chase, Md., and Silver Spring, there was little or no rain.

The Weather Bureau said the thundercloud which dumped the deluge moved at less than 10 miles per hour, concentrating the downpour. Such clouds usually travel 25 to 35 miles an hour, they said, spreading their precipitation more widely.

The official forecast for today was partly cloudy, continued warm, high about 88, scattered afternoon thundershowers." Forecasters said the showers today are apt to be more numerous.

A Government cooperative weather observer whose station is on the Takoma Park-Silver Spring boundary said that 2.06 inches fell there, exactly five years to the day after a 4.42-inch downpour.

A second cooperative observer in Takoma Park noted almost 2.5 inches, which fell between 5 p. m. and 7 p. m. At Brookside Manor, .89 of an inch was reported.

40 Cars Stalled

Battalion Chief Edward A. Sweeney of the Fire Department said between 500 and 600 homes had flooded cellars in the Brightwood and lower Brightwood area. He began a canvass to warn householders to extinguish gas pilot lights in basements and disconnect electrical appliances. Four radio stations broadcast the warning.

More than 40 autos were stalled and 20 manhole covers, weighing 75 pounds each, were lifted from their bases. One wheel of a motorist's car dropped into an uncovered manhole at 3rd and Nicholson sts. nw.

Tito Pledges Aid in Balkan Red Ousters

Will Help Albania, Bulgaria Throw Out His Communist Foes

Belgrade, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito promised the Bulgarian and Albanian people plainly, if indirectly, today that he would aid them in any attempt to overthrow their Communist regimes which are joining in the Russian-bloc boycott of this country.

Addressing a gathering of Macedonians at Skoplje on the fifth anniversary of the Yugoslav Macedonian Republic, Tito said.

Reds Seek Territory

"I think the time will come when the Bulgarian people, ignoring base and shameless slanders, will be able to extend their fraternal hand to us, and we will help them 'remove whatever individuals who have so far put up the obstacles to the creation and preservation of brotherly relations.

"The position with Albania is the same."

Tito said that the Bulgarian, Romanian and Hungarian Communist regimes, as well as the Greek rebels, would like to grab territory from Yugoslavia.

In a reference which his hearers regarded as aimed at both Russia and the United States, Tito said:

"Our people will never be turned away from their socialistic path by any power no matter from which side it may come, nor can they be shaken or intimidated from firmly persisting in their struggle for the freedom and integrity of their socialistic homeland."

Russian Citizen Expelled

Tito made his speech as the government announced here that it had arrested and expelled a Russian citizen for "insults publicly made against the Yugoslav state."

The Russian was identified as Andrei Kuzmicaev, member of the joint Yugoslav-Soviet Danube River Navigation Co. Yugoslav

Senate Votes Curb on AEC Fellowships

Red Bar Approved As Rider to Bill For Independent Offices' Funds

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate last night voted to bar all subversives from the Atomic Energy Commission's research fellowship program.

The rider, requiring an FBI loyalty check of students recommended for the fellowships, was tied to the $7,636,006,000 independent offices bill by a Senate voice vote.

The Senate then passed the big money bill and sped it to conference with the House. Action came after a five-day wrangle over independent economy moves, but instead of being clipped the bill was increased some 27 million dollars net.

First Break in 2 Weeks

It was the first break in two weeks in the Senate's big money bill pile-up, but the real key to the log-jam, the $5,647,724,000 foreign aid bill, will come up today. Before recessing overnight, the Senate made the five-week overdue aid measure its unfinished business. The recently recommitted bill will head into another confusing round of parliamentary points of order when the Senate meets at noon.

Approved by a voice vote, the Independent offices bill rider barring AEC fellowships to Communists and other subversives was fastened to the AEC section of the offices measure, carrying funds for more than a score of Federal agencies.

Earlier the Senate approved another AEC rider providing for closer supervision by the Budget Bureau and Congress over construction projects in excess of $500,000. Both amendments were sponsored by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), in charge of the bill.

A third, by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), sought to bar the AEC from using natural gas for fuel at its Oak Ridge, Tenn., plant. This was rejected by a voice vote after protests that 50 miles of gas line have already been laid.

Grant Made to Red

The O'Mahoney ban on AEC fellowships to students having subversive leanings followed disclosure earlier this year that at least one self-avowed Communist, Hans Freistadt, 23-year-old University of North Carolina student, was granted a fellowship.

The commission subsequently moved to revoke Freistadt's grant, and the National Research Council, which administers the fellowship program, required student candidates to sign a loyalty oath and non-Communist affidavit.

O'Mahoney asked that this safeguard be strengthened and Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee did not object.

Only Senator Glen Taylor (D., ry Wallace, voted no. Taylor said ry Wallace, voted no. Taylor said the FBI check would discourage scientists from entering the field

JOHN S. BATTLE
Democratic Nominee for Virginia Governor

John Stewart Battle accepted the news of his nomination to be Virginia's Governor with calm gratification at his Charlottesville home.

Then he got into his car to drive 70 miles to Richmond to make a 2 a. m. (EDT) victory speech at his headquarters.

He said he was less concerned about the outcome of the vote than he was about the well-being of his 85-year-old mother who insisted on staying up to hear the returns.

Battle has a record of almost 20 years in the State Legislature. His political career began in 1930 with his election to the House of Delegates from Charlottesville and Albemarle and Greene Counties.

He was reelected in 1932, and the following year won a seat in the State Senate, representing

Byrd Man Democrats' Nominee for Governor

BULLETIN

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 3 (U.P.). Col. Francis Pickens Miller conceded at 2:40 a. m. (EDT) today that John S. Battle had won the Virginia Democratic primary race for Governor.

"I extend to Mr. Battle my heartiest good wishes," the defeated liberal candidate said, and I, along with all good Virginia Democrats, will support him in the general election."

BULLETIN

Remmie L. Arnold, 19,910; John S. Battle, 125,101; Horace H. Edwards, 43,019; Francis P. Miller, 99,531.

By Richard Morris and Charles Davis
Post Reporters

State Senator John S. Battle early today had won Virginia's Democratic primary for Governor.

With only 194 of the State's 1768 precincts unreported, two of the three rival candidates conceded his nomination. However, Francis Pickens Miller, Battle's closest opponent, refused to concede victory to Battle.

The unofficial vote with 1574 of the 1768 precincts in, showed Battle, 112,756; Miller, 89,579; Horace H. Edwards, 40,419; Remmie L. Arnold, 18,291.

Miller Won't Concede

Edwards conceded the election to Battle, who was supported by United States Senator Harry F. Byrd and the Byrd organization, at 12:43 a. m., declaring he would give his "full support" to Battle.

However, Miller said the returns were not yet "sufficiently clear" in his judgment to "justify my conceding."

Arnold, low man in the race, gave up at 12:38 a. m. and wished Battle luck as "the next Governor of Virginia." Shortly after midnight the Associated Press flatly stated Battle was the winner.

Thus ended the most serious threat to the party leadership of Senator Byrd in the last 25 years.

Some Service Commissaries To Be Closed

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday overwhelmingly approved an agreement with the armed forces to do away with commissaries in big city areas where civilian shopping facilities are available to servicemen.

There are five commissaries in this area, at Fort McNair, Walter Reed Hospital, Bolling Air Base, Fort Myer and Alexandria Quartermaster Depot.

It was not clear whether commissaries at Fort Belvoir, Va., and Andrews Air Force Base, Md., would be affected by the order.

The agreement, which must be in full force by January 1, will end tax-free, "bargain" purchases for thousands of service personnel and their relatives.

It also prohibits sales of costly luxury items such as fur coats, diamonds and television sets in Army post exchanges and Navy ship stores. In addition, such stores must increase prices enough to pay their own overhead, which at present is costing the taxpayers about four million dollars a year.

The action, an outgrowth of an investigation of merchant complaints that they could not compete with the lower prices of military stores, was approved by 22 of the 23 committee members present.

Representative James E. Van Zandt (R., Pa.), did not vote. He said profits from the stores traditionally have been used to buy military athletic and recreation equipment. Now, he said, such equipment will have to be paid for by the taxpayers.

The Army, Navy and Marine Corps must draft uniform regulations putting the agreement into operation. It will require the services to close all military commissaries in large retail areas in the United States by January 1. Isolated military posts in this

Miller Leads Battle in Nearby Vote

Nearby northern Virginia swung away from the "Byrd machine" to give an edge to independent candidate Francis P. Miller, but Byrd-backed John S. Battle apparently seemed headed for State-wide victory.

In nearly every nearby northern Virginia area, Francis Miller was leading Battle by a comfortable margin late last night in the Democratic primary as election returns were still being counted by weary judges. The remainder of the Eighth Congressional District went to Battle, however.

The heavily urban areas across the Potomac in Virginia gave Miller his biggest local margins. In Alexandria, he was enjoying nearly a 3-2 margin on the basis of complete returns.

In Arlington, his lead was not as great percentage-wise, but Miller's votes still exceeded those given Battle. This was a sharp departure from the last gubernatorial race, when William M. Tuck, approved Byrd man, had won an easy victory in the county.

Loudoun stuck by the Byrd machine to give Battle a clear win, on the basis of complete returns, and in Prince William, Battle also coasted in.

The northern Virginia voting went about as had been expected. Most political observers predicted Miller would receive strong backing from labor elements in nearby Virginia.

Another factor in his favor was the large influx of new residents into the Virginia side of the Washington area who had openly announced their antipathy toward the "Byrd machine" candidate.

In the race for lieutenant governor, incumbent L. Preston Collins experienced no more difficulty locally than he was getting from the rest of the State, and seemed assured of an easy win.

In the race for attorney general, however, unexpected support for Moss Plunkett came when he received 2285 votes to 2787 for

Grocer Crowned By Beer Bottle In Tax Squabble

The new sales tax claimed its first casualty yesterday when two cents tacked on to the price of six beers led to a dispute that sent tax money and beer bottles flying and a store owner to Garfield Hospital.

Jacob Loteker, 53, who owns a grocery store at 1820 15th st. nw., told police a customer came into the store last night and ordered six bottles of beer. When Loteker asked for additional tax money, he said the purchaser professed an ignorance of the new ruling. The argument led to a scuffle andd Loteker was cut across the scalp with a beer bottle wielded by the customer, police said. They are looking for the customer, described as a dark brown-skinned Negro of medium height weighing about 160 pounds.

Utah Divorce Granted Mrs. Eccles in One Day

Ogden, Utah, Aug. 2 (AP).—Maysie Y. Eccles of Ogden was granted a divorce late this afternoon from Marriner S. Eccles, member of the Federal Reserve Board.

The private eye had the man's wife in the apartment alone with another man.

From our vantage point 150 feet away we had an ideal view. It was 9:30 p. m. and they seemed to be only talking as they sat together on the living room couch.

We were to wait five hours.

To a novitiate, the two of them seemed so guileless, the windows unshuttered as they were. Not so to the Eye, an old hand.

"The average person has just got his mind somewhere else," he explained. "Anywhere else but on that someone who is watching him. At the most, they think being on the second floor makes them safe and they don't need to draw the blinds."

It was no accident that we were parked on a slope, almost on a level with that second floor. It was like having seats midway in a small amphitheater.

"When I catch them . . . and they're going to be caught," the Eye said darkly, his bright green eyes piercing the night like a cat's . . . "when I catch them, the husband will have a case whereby he can get himself a divorce, possibly get custody of his child—and maybe save himself a smart bunch of alimony."

What the Eye wanted above all tonight was that the man should stay in the apartment until a late hour.

"That would indicate," he said with a voice no longer even cynical, "that he was not up there for a quiet game of checkers."

Then he wanted to see him staying in the apartment several more times until late hours. Then . . .

Then one night perhaps there would be a sudden crashing of that door up there on the second floor, a plunge into the bed-

Opposition in Congress

Restrictions on Truman's Arms Power Now Foreseen

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Action to restrict the proposed broad power of the President to determine which nations will get weapons under the arms program was indicated yesterday as a result of strong congressional opposition.

This issue was raised at a closed meeting in which Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson appeared before the combined Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees.

At the same session, it was learned, members of the two committees, who will jointly consider the proposed $1,450,000,000 foreign military-aid program, raised a number of other objections to the plan.

Secretary Acheson reportedly told the committee that he would take under consideration the revisions suggested.

The extent of presidential power under the pending bill was also challenged in open session in the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which has been holding hearings on the arms bill since last week.

There, Representatives John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.), James G. Fulton (R., Pa.) and Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) demanded to know why the President should get broader authority under the arms bill than he has under the European Recovery Program.

Their questions came as the committee met to hear indorsements of the bill from Averell W. Harriman, roving Ambassador for

Better to Repair White House Than Build, Commission Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The White House, most famous mansion in the land, will continue as an adornment of the National Capital.

A commission agreed yesterday that it would be better to reconstruct the President's home than to tear it down and build a substitute.

Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, had advocated razing the White House. He argued that it would be wiser and cheaper to put up a new structure of marble—a suggestion that led one architect to say that it was impossible to think that the American people wanted an "ersatz White House."

Last spring, President Truman appointed a special commission to decide what was to be done to the stately old house, ravaged by war, fire and 150 years of wear and tear. Named head of the commission was Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) chairman of the Senate Appropriations Commission.

Yesterday, after a meeting of the commission in the East Wing of the White House, McKellar told reporters about the decision. He said:

"We have agreed on the renovation of the present building, leaving the walls as they are."

He said that the commission had consulted a number of architects, and that all said that reconstruction was both feasible and desirable. The work would get started, he said, "very, very soon."

U. S. Jet Fighters Readied in Germany

London, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The chiefs of staff of the United States fighting services announced today that the American Air Force would soon have a 100 per cent jet fighter striking fleet in Germany.

The streamlined ground forces, they said, will be maintained at their present strength ready for any emergency.

Gen. Omar Bradley, chief of staff of the Army; Adm. Louis Denfeld, chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force, flew to London to confer with other Atlantic Pact military leaders after making their announcement at Grafenwoehr, Germany.

Unification Seen Soon

It was indicated that by the time the defense chiefs end their present tour of western Europe they will have formed the core of a permanent organization to coordinate the fighting forces of the Atlantic Pact countries into a unified whole.

They disclosed also that they are discussing plans to incorporate the existing defense organization of the Western European Union—comprising Britain, France, Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg—into the Atlantic Pact organization.

The chiefs of staff will confer here with military chiefs of Britain, Denmark and Norway starting Wednesday. On Friday they will go to Paris for talks with French, Belgian and Netherlands leaders.

Troops in Review

Seventeen thousand troops of the First Infantry Division and attached units. Backed by the newly steamlined constabulary and artillery detachments, took part in a review yesterday at Grafenwoehr, close to the Czechoslovak frontier.

More than 100 planes, including jet "Shooting Stars"; 100 tanks and more than 1000 other vehicles were in the review.

It was Vandenberg who announced the fighter force in Germany would soon be 100 per cent jet. The Thunderbolts which were the first-line fighters at the end of the war will be retired, he said.

2-Star General

Arms Bill Written by Lemnitzer

By Robert S. Allen

Chief author of the Administration's controversial $1,450,000,000 European arms bill is a two-star Army General.

Lemnitzer

He is Maj. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Deputy Commandant of the National War College and chairman of the Foreign Assistance Coordinating Committee. This is an inter-departmental body made up of representatives of State and Defense Departments, ECA and other Government agencies.

A 50-year-old West Pointer who served under Generals Patton and Mark Clark, Lemnitzer has played a key background role in both the North Atlantic Pact and the supplementary arms program. Virtually unknown publicly, he has been a decisive factor in United States foreign policy for several years through his position as the military's spokesman in that field.

Lemnitzer is the progenitor of the "secret" features of the arms bill.

The measure is actually two bills. They are inter-related, but are widely different in import.

The first authorizes the proposed huge outlay for rearming western Europe under the Atlantic Pact. Administration and congressional comment has been focused wholly on this. The "secret" measure would give the President practically unlimited powers to make secret commitments not only to any nation but groups and even individuals.

Under these provisions, congressional, or public, control of foreign policy would be virtually wiped out. Also, in scope and intent they go far beyond the North Atlantic Pact. They empower the President or his representatives, such as military officers or diplomats, to make secret arms and other commitments to nations, factions, committees or individuals in any part of the world.

Under these clauses the United States could be committed to war without Congress or the public knowing anything about it.

The bill is so extraordinary that some members of Congress have privately expressed doubts that the President is aware of its true nature. They cite as significant his complete silence on the matter.

House Votes Support For Tung Nuts, Honey

The House passed yesterday and sent to the Senate a bill to establish price supports for tung nuts and honey.

Acting on advice of its Agriculture Committee that said "both industries are in grave danger unless relief is made available," the House voted to direct the Secretary of Agriculture—through loans, purchases or other operations—to support the price of honey and tung nuts at 90 per cent of parity.

Tung nuts are the source of tung, or China wood, oil used in making paint, electrical insulation and other products.

RAYBURN HONORED—Defense Secretary Louis Johnson holds a venison bone while Senator McGrath (D., R. I.) delivers an out-of-side-of-mouth comment to their host, Representative Boykin (D., Ala.). The dinner yesterday was of wild game and in honor of House Speaker Rayburn. The menu included bear, antelope, venison, raccoon and salmon. At left is W. Averell Harriman, roving ambassador for the Marshall Plan

Speaker Rayburn Honored By Official Washington

Official Washington paid homage last night to one of the men who keep the wheels of Congress turning smoothly—Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.).

A throng of about 750 men in high Government office attended a dinner which Representative Boykin (D., Ala.) arranged in Rayburn's honor at the Washington Hotel.

Boykin introduced Rayburn to the banquet crowd as "one of the greatest men of the United States and the entire world, a true Southern gentleman, a great statesman and a great American."

Diners included Cabinet members, Supreme Court Justices, most of the Senators and Representatives, diplomats, head of Government agencies and business and labor leaders.

Included on the menu Boykin arranged were these delicacies: Alabama bear, buffalo, racoon, Canadian salmon, elk, venison and wild turkey.

At the speakers table, in addition to Rayburn and Boykin, were Chief Justice Vinson, Vice President Barkley, Attorney General Clark, Senator McGrath (D., R. I.), Undersecretary of the Interior Chapman, Democratic House Leader McCormack (D., Mass.) and Republican House Leader Martin (R., Mass.).

A big sign back of the speaker's table read: "Everything is made for love," which is an expression used frequently by Boykin in his House debates. The Alabaman is a close friend and admirer of Rayburn.

'Fanny Mae' Gets Bulk Of New RFC Loans

Some spectators were puzzled today to hear that the bulk of Reconstruction Finance loans are going to "Fanny Mae."

These loans are being made now at the rate of about $50,000,000 a week, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee was told by an RFC official.

But then it was explained that "Fanny Mae" is Government slang for the Federal National Mortgage Association—the FNMA.

the European Economic Administration, and from Ambassador to Greece Henry F. Grady.

The committee also received a statement sent by Lewis A. Douglas, Ambassador to Great Britain, supporting the arms plan.

After meeting with the Senate group, Secretary Acheson, accompanied by Ernest A. Gross, Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Affairs, met privately with Representative John Kee (D., W. Va.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

While they declined to comment on their talk, it is believed to have concerned revisions in the arms bill which the Administration may soon submit.

These changes are not expected to cut the total cash outlay sought in the bill, although there have been demands to halve the $1,450,000,000 figure.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who will head the Senate's joint committee hearings on the bill, said that group will meet again in executive session on Friday and open its hearings Monday.

Asked for comment on yesterday's two-hour executive meeting, Connally said:

"We are trying to meet the objections of committee members to the end that within the scope of the bill and its objectives we may get as large an agreement as possible."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who has been a chief supporter of bipartisan foreign policy but who has objected to the form of the arms proposal, led opposition to the Presidential power in the bill, it was said.

Section 3 of the bill states:

"The President is authorized, upon the request of any nation, to furnish assistance to such nation through grants, or for payments in cash, or through any other means and upon such other terms as he deems appropriate" within the purpose of the legislation.

In the bill, the term "nation" is broadly defined as "any foreign government or country, or group thereof; or any representatives or group of the people of any country, however constituted, designated as a 'nation' by the President for the purposes of this act."

For the purposes of the act, the President also could allocate funds "to any agency" of the Government.

No nations are specified by name in the legislation, although it has been announced that Western European members would receive the bulk of the arms, with Greece, Turkey, Iran, Korea and the Philippines also sharing in the aid.

Secretary Acheson was said to have requested the members of the joint Senate committee to withhold their final judgment on the plan until full testimony has been heard. He previously made a similar plea publicly.

Acheson, or a representative, probably will appear before the joint committee when it meets Friday and the Administration's concessions on revisions may be disclosed at that time.

Vandenberg and Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) have already told him the bill cannot pass the Senate in its present form and both believe limited arms aid is urgent.

Ambassador Harriman told the House committee that "I have never been as optimistic as I am today that the maintenance of peace and freedom is within our reach in Europe, provided—

1. ". . . we carry out vigorously the policies and programs in which we are engaged, including the Military Assistance Program;

2. ". . . we recognize that we face forces determined and persistent, which must be met with equal determination and perseverance. We cannot relax because of early successes."

During the past two years, he said, "there has been great and encouraging growth of political stability and economic progress, and above all, the growth of confidence and determination."

This is due, said Harriman, to the European Recovery Plan, our own strengthened military position, the North Atlantic Treaty and the proposed foreign arms aid.

"If we turn aside today or put off action on the proposed assistance," he declared, "doubts may well arise again," augmented by the voices of "the subversive elements, the appeasers, those who would trust 'neutrality.'"

He said he is satisfied the arms program will not impair European recovery, but "will strengthen it."

Questioned about why some European aid recipients are supplying Communist countries with goods which this Nation has on a "prohibited" list, on grounds of national security, Harriman said there is some dispute over what does concern security.

"I think that there has been a very fair degree of cooperation" by the Marshall Plan countries, he said.

Asked what has been done in Western Europe to remove trade barriers, Harriman said:

"There's been some removing of trade barriers. They recognize that this year must be a year of eliminating trade barriers."

While several committee members indicated dissatisfaction with Harriman's answers on this point, stating he was not being specific, Harriman said that thus far the Marshall Plan had to concentrate on recovery and checking inflation.

"What's in the offing that calls for the President to ask for such a grant of power?" demanded Representative Judd. Harriman said this was not for him to discuss.

In his statement filed with the committee, Ambassador Douglas said the Western Union defense establishment of Great Britain, France, the Netherlands and Luxembourg constitutes a firm basis for European defense.

Douglas, who has been working closely with that group in an observer capacity ,and who forwarded the Western Union nations' requests for arms aid, said:

"The defense organization has made a very considerable progress, particularly as regards planning. Plans have been made for the ground and air defense of Western Europe, and for the coordinated action of naval forces in the event of war . . ."

They have distributed some equipment for mutual defense, established several communications systems, arranged for manufacture of some standardized items nad held combined training maneuvers, he added.

Ambassador Grady told the committee that failure to give further military assistance to Greece "would have a disastrous effect upon the spirit of the Army" in fighting the Communist-led Greek guerillas.

of atomic research and "play into the hands of our enemies" by restricting individual freedom.

Answering Taylor, Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), ranking minority member of the Joint Atomic Committee, denied there is any shortage of atomic scientists. He said more scientists are entering the atomic research field than ever before.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) called the amendment a "dangerous encroachment on the rights of the individual" but said "there is nothing we can do about it until this hysteria runs ts course."

Under close questioning by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), O'Mahoney said there were "no grounds for apprehension" that the loyalty check will either be "abused" by the FBI, or that the FBI's reports "would be final." But he said the AEC should be given "everything the FBI has" on the loyalty status of a successful applicant to help the commission draw its own conclusion.

Passage of the independent offices measure cleared the way for another nip-and-tuck floor battle on the long-blocked foreign aid bill. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) has announced he will raise points of order against committee-approved riders requiring mandatory purchase of surplus American farm products, earmarking 50 million dollars for Spain, and barring French use of ECA counterpart funds unless Morocco ends discriminations against American business interests.

Arabs Accept Israel Plan on Refugees

Lausanne, Switzerland, August 2 (AP).—The first major progress toward permanent peace in Palestine was made today after four months of negotiations.

Egypt, Syria, Lebanon and Hashemite Jordan (Trans-Jordan) said they are prepared to begin immediate discussion of the Arab refugee problem on terms proposed last week by Israel.

The Arab representatives told the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission they are ready to accept the Israeli proposal without reservation.

On July 29, Israel told the commission it is prepared to readmit to Israel territory a sizable number of the estimated 800,000 Arab refugees.

A commission spokesman said then the exact number of refugees Israel would accept was not contained in the proposal. A spokesman in Haifa, Israel, said, however, Israel's envoy to the United States State Department had indicated the Jewish state is ready to allow some 150,000 refugees to be repatriated. In order to do this, the monthly quota of Jewish immigrants would be reduced to permit 8000 Arab repatriates to be admitted monthly, this spokesman said.

A commission spokesman called the Arab acceptance of the Israeli offer "the first definite, practical step forward since the conference opened on April 26, and a definitely hopeful sign."

British Give 2 Millions For Arab Refugees

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—Britain has sent two million dollars to Hashemite Jordan to help resettle Palestine Arab refugees on its soil.

An official British source said today he understood the United States was matching the gift with a like amount but a State Department spokesman in Washington denied it.

As Foiled

Reds Report U. S.-Vatican Czech Plot

Prague, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Communist press claimed today a joint Vatican-American plot to provoke civil war in Czechoslovakia over the church-state controversy had been foiled.

The charge was made by the Communist Party organ, Rude Prayo, which claimed an "Organization X," allegedly under an American high command, was working to "organize espionage, sabotage and diversion in countries that have abandoned the capitalist system."

In an article by its foreign commentator, Andre Simone, Rude Pravo named Allen Dulles, brother of Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), as chief of "Organization X."

Simone also listed Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, whom he described as "the Pope's Hjalmar Schacht," as one of the organization's leaders.

(In New York, Dulles said he knew nothing about the report. He said he is chairman of the executive committee of the National Committee for Free Europe, whose purpose is to further the cause of liberty and peace and to support in America political leaders who have been driven from their homes by communism.)

"The Vatican spy service led by a general of the Jesuit order, Janson, and under direct control of the State Secretary of the Vatican, Montini, cooperates directly with Organization X in its endeavor to cause chaos in the peoples' democracies," the Communist writer said.

(The Vatican today identified a Father John Baptist Janssens as General of the Society of Jesus. Msgr. Giovanni Battista Montini is the Vatican's acting Secretary of State.)

In Czechoslovakia, the article claimed, the plot of "The Vatican's fifth column—the Roman Catholic hierarchy," was to provoke "clashes throughout the nation."

"Unrest and riots," it said, were to be stirred up by having Archbishop Josef Beran lock himself in his palace and pretend to be a "martyrd," and then have the Catholic faithful rise and fight the Communists in his defense.

Commentator Simone said after the alleged church putsch failed, the Vatican "tried again with its decree excommunicating Communists—but this also proved a splash on the surface."

Vatican Radio Likens Reds to Roman Nero

Vatican City, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Vatican radio said today the Communist governments of eastern Europe, like the Roman emperor Nero, are trying to wipe out Christianity.

The broadcast stressed that the Roman Catholic Church cannot yield to efforts to make it "harmonize" itself with the Communist regimes, declaring:

"If at the times of Nero and Diocletian the Christian Church had 'harmonized' itself with the laws of the Roman state, we probably would have had fewer martyrs, but no Christianity."

Romania, which dissolved all its Roman Catholic welfare orders yesterday, ordering 1500 monks and nuns to retire or become laymen, thereby took another step toward "total de-Christianization," the Vatican radio said.

It warned Romania's majority Orthodox Church—Roman Catholics are a minority there, with about 2,800,000 of the 16 million population—against the consequences of compromising with the Communist regime.

East Indian States Agree on United Rule

Batavia, Java, Aug. 2 (AP).—Representatives of the Indonesian Republic and 15 Dutch-backed states of the East Indies agreed today to form a United States of Indonesia that will accept sovereignty under the Netherlands crown.

The agreement still needs Dutch approval. It will be submitted at a forthcoming round-table conference on Indonesia's future, scheduled to be held at The Hague.

The agreement calls for a European-type provisional government to be formed as soon as possible, covering all 72 million inhabitants of the islands the Dutch once ruled as colonies.

It marks, presumably, one of the final steps toward ending the revolt against Dutch rule that has resulted in sporadic fighting since Indonesia's liberation from the Japanese in 1945.

The United Nations Commission for Indonesia has announced that a formal cease-fire between the Dutch and the Republicans will be proclaimed Wednesday and go into effect a few days later.

The new country will be called "Republik Indonesia Serikat" (Republic of the United States of Indonesia).

Tito Pledges Red Ouster Aid

militiamen arrested him Saturday at a university here.

Tito denounced the Bulgarian and Greek Communist Parties for stirring up the old Balkan rivalry regarding Masedonia.

"They cast their eyes on Macedonia, but it was counting chickens before they were hatched," Tito said of the Bulgarians.

"The Cominform resolution (boycotting Tito) offered an opportunity to the Communist Party of Bulgaria to reveal without hindrance all its extreme nationalist 'greater Bulgarian' claims to Macedonia."

Tito rejected the Cominform claim that he had permitted Greek government troops to cross the Yugoslav border and attack the Greek rebels from behind. This story, he said, was "nothing but the throwing of dust into the eyes of the masses of the entire world, in order to mask their dirty plan for the liquidation of the democratic movement in Greece."

He said the Cominform was working through Greek Communist leaders. Thus he reemphasized the open split between himself and the present Greek rebel leadership.

War Bride, 53 Others Become Citizens

The Washington Post

IT WAS IN DECEMBER, 1944—Mrs. Genevieve Pierette Lane, 28, is shown with her husband, Arthur, and son Stevie, after receiving her American citizenship yesterday. She met her husband, then an infantry lieutenant, after he rescued a puppy that ran away in Marseilles

A French war bride who met her husband when her dog ran away was one of 54 persons sworn in yesterday as American citizens in District Court.

She is Mrs. Genevieve Pierette Lane, 28, blonde and with an "oh-so-pretty" French accent. She told reporters how her romance began.

It was in December, 1944, she said, that her mongrel pup darted away from her on the streets of Marseilles. She rushed after it to find it in the hands of a first lieutenant of the American Infantry. He was beside a jeep and the officer turned out to be "my Arthur."

There was a little talk and Arthur agreed to hand the animal over on one condition—that Genevieve have a drink with him.

She did, they corresponded and on April 18, 1945, there were wedding bells.

The Lanes reside at 1291 Brenwood rd. ne. Arthur now operates a liquor store. Mrs. Lane doesn't miss the dog because she is too busy caring for Steven, their 3-year-old.

Chinese Nationalists Admit Red Armies Are Penetrating Deeper Into Central China

Canton, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Communists drove their multiheaded southward offensive deeper into central China today. The Red gains were acknowledged by the Nationalists.

In the vital ricebowl province of Hunan, the Communists again severed the Canton-Hankow railway—this time 313 miles north of this refugee Nationalist capital. The Reds pushed their drive to outflank the main Hunan defense force.

In neighboring Kiangsi province, the Red spearheads moved southward in a threat to Nationalist forces which had pushed from Hunan in attempt to cut the Red supply lines.

Far away from the main fighting front, the Communists also pressed deeper into Kansu province in a new offensive against the vast area of northwestern China ruled by Moslem warlords.

In Shanghai, the Communist Labor Board today cleared demonstrating former employers of the United States Navy from the American Consulate General.

The board then put forward an arbitration plan for settlement. It asked Consulate Administrative officer Reuben Thomas to cable the terms to Washington.

Approximately 800 former employes, mostly Chinese but including some Indians and White Russians, besieged the consulate Friday, demanding 6½ months wages as severance pay.

Treatment of Newsmen Brings U. S. Protest

The United States has delivered a "strong protest" to Chinese Communist authorities against the treatment of two American newspapermen in Shanghai, the State Department revealed yesterday.

It concerned the confinement of Randall Gould, editor of the Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury, and Charles F. Miner, the owner's representative. They were kept in the newspaper office for 48 hours by a mob of former Chinese employes.

The protest was signed by U. S. Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart, who now is on his way back to this country for consultations on the China situation.

It said the employes subjected the two men to hunger, thirst and mental anguish before Communist police finally acted in their behalf.

SPEAKING OF Furniture

By ORION L. CAIN

LIGHTING THE WAY

Only recently has lighting become one of the elements of decoration. In the old days candelabra, chandeliers and lamps were often things of beauty and part of the decorative scheme of the room, but light itself was utilitarian . . . to see by, and not very well at that.

Lighting is still primarily utilitarian, but it has a second function, born of electricity . . . that of dramatic appeal.

A decorator now paints with light as with color. Flood lighting and indirect lights, outline or emphasize architectural features, set off planes or model the curve of a wall. With hidden saucers of light, effects can be produced which were impossible a generation ago.

Light may be concentrated on the background, on the furniture, or focus attention on a picture as shown in the above illustration. At the same time it may be diffused throughout the room, producing the best light for the eyes.

If you have any problems, stop in and discuss them with us.

Battle Is Winner In Virginia Race

in 32 years, brought out an estimated record vote of 300,000.

Republicans in Virginia were holding their first State-wide primary, but cast only a comparative handful of votes.

In races overshadowed by the gubernatorial contest, Lieut. Gov. L. Preston Collins and Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., easily defeated opponents seeking to oust them from their jobs.

This was the latest unofficial tally:

For Lieutenant Governor, with 1371 of 1768 precincts reporting: Collins, 125,104; Nick Prillaman, 56,448.

For Attorney General, with 1346 of 1768 precincts reporting: Almond, 122,606; Moss A. Plunkett, 57,570.

Unofficial tallies in the only State-wide Republican contest, for Lieutenant Governor, with 751 of 1768 precincts reporting: E. Thomas McGuire, 1510; Berkeley Williams, 1410.

Vote By Districts

This was the District-by-District vote fo rthe four Democratic gubernatorial candidates.

First (153 of 164 precincts reported)—Arnold, 1816; Battle, 12,072; Edwards, 5366; Miller, 9123.

Second (115 of 137 precincts reported)—Arnold, 1860; Battle, 10,662; Edwards, 5162; Miller, 10,130.

Third (119 of 127 precincts reported)—Arnold, 4867; Battle, 15,533; Edwards, 5254; Miller, 16,330.

Fifth (194 of 242 precincts reported)—Arnold, 1091; Battle, 12,290; Edwards, 3531; Miller, 7377.

Sixth (178 of 198 precincts reported)—Arnold, 1554; Battle, 11,080; Edwards, 3132; Miller, 8805.

Seventh (239 of 256 precincts reported)—Arnold, 630; Battle, 13,788; Edwards, 2934; Miller, 6261.

Eighth (216 of 241 precincts reported)—Arnold, 1388; Battle, 17,941; Edwards, 3177; Miller, 15,495.

Ninth (211 of 250 precincts reported)Arnold, 458; Battle, 8282; Edwards, 6263; Miller, 9998.

Four Rival Candidates

Yesterday's balloting was the climax of a bitter and tempestuous campaign that started with active stumping more than a year ago.

The main issue, acknowledged privately or publicly by the candidates and the populace, was whether the so-called "Byrd machine" could retain its grip on Virginia politics for another four years after a quarter of a century of authority.

Battle, 59, of Charlottesville, entered the campaign with a slight edge in the view of Richmond bettors, and with the sanction of Senator Harry F. Byrd and his "organization."

Miller, 53, of Albemarle County, steadfastly proclaimed his intention of overthrowing the dominant organization and to "return the government of Virginia to the people." He was branded a "CIO" candidate by the Byrd organization.

Edwards, 46, former mayor of Richmond, welcomed voters opposed to "both extremes" represented by Miller and Battle and promised harmony in the Democratic Party, plus a 2 per cent sales tax for school needs.

Arnold, 55, president of the second largest pen manufacturing concern in the world, at Petersburg, proclaimed that under his guidance the Old Dominion would be freed from the yoke of "professional politicians" and given "sound government by a businessman." He said the Byrd-Battle forces tried to buy him out of the race.

Aside from what Miller called "the political issue" in the campaign, the most frequently discussed question was what to do about Virginia's admittedly second rate school system.

Arnold, who shuddered at the thought of more taxes, recommended bond issues if sufficient funds for construction and better salaries were not available from surpluses.

Battle, who has been chairman of the State Senate Finance Committee for 5 of his 20 years in the General Assembly, contended there is enough money in the public till to take care of 15 million dollar grants to localities annually.

Edwards Skeptical

Edwards, who fell out with the "organization" while chairman of the State Central Democratic Committee, remained skeptical about the existence of such funds, and said "the only solution" was a sales tax.

Miller, who had spent four years in the House of Delegates from Fairfax County before serving as a colonel in World War II, argued that stricter collection of taxes and use of general fund surpluses would serve the purpose.

Collins, th eincumbent Lieutenant Governor from Marion, who served as president of the State Senate, was unopposed until Prillaman, mayor of Martinsville, withdrew from the gubernatorial contest in the spring.

Prillaman pulled out of the gubernatorial race to run on the "Miller ticket" because, he said, his ideas so nearly "coincided" with Miller's that he could not oppose him.

Almond, whose home is in Roanoke, left his seat in the House of Representatives to be appointed attorney general in 1948 on the death of Harvey B. Apperson, also of Roanoke.

Almond's "anti-organization" opponent in yesterday's primary, Plunkett, also of Roanoke, previously had been an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Delegates, the State Senate, the governorship, and the House of Representatives.

Williams, former Richmond postmaster, and McGuire, Petersburg insurance man, were candidates for Lieutenant Governor in the only State-wide GOP ontest in yesterday's voting.

Walter Johnson, of Heathsville, Commonwealth's Attorney of Northumberland County, was the only GOP gubernatorial candidate. Nomination of a Democrat is tantamount to election in Virginia. The Republicans did not put up a candidate for attorney general.

There were 31 contests for 46 seats in the House of Delegates in the Democratic primary. Thirty-four incumbent House Democrats were without opposition. The only Senatorial contest was in the Fourth District.

There were only three Republican House primary contests including one in Fairfax.

Battle Accepts News Calmly

Charlottesville and Albemarle, Greene, Madison and Fluvanna Counties. Since that time he has been reelected without opposition and he currently holds the chairmanship of the powerful Senate Finance Committee.

Battle's growth and education are centered around the Southside and Blue Ridge areas of Virginia. The son of a Baptist minister, he was born on July 11, 1890, in New Bern, N. C., while his father, the Rev. Dr. Henry W. Battle, was pastor of a church in that city. His grandfather was Gen. Cullen A. Battle of the Confederate Army.

Battle attended public and private schools in Petersburg and received his law degree from the University of Virginia in 1913. He practices law in Charlottesville.

The tall, gray-haired attorney has been a member of the board of visitors and president of the alumni association of the University of Virginia, a member of the council and president of the Virginia State bar and president of the Charlottesville Kiwanis Club.

He is a member of the First Baptist Church of Charlottesville, the American Legion—as a result of service in World War I as a private in the Army—a past master of the Charlottesville Lodge 55 of the Masons, past high priest of Keystone Chapter 58, a Shriner, member of Acca Temple, an Elk, and a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholarship fraternity.

Taxation and budget matters have been Senator Battle's special interests in the General Assembly. But as a member of other committees he has had a part in shaping much legislation of major importance to the State.

Of the legislation which the Senator is credited with sponsoring during his service in the General Assembly, three examples are the measures which established and improved the unemployed compensation system; the probation and parole system for the State's corrective institutions, and legislation which abolished the sheriff fee system in Virginia cities and counties.

Senator Battle's wife was the former Miss Janie Lipscomb of Charlottesville. Their two sons practice law in Charlottesville.

Miller Leads in Nearby Voting

J. Lindsay Almond in Alexandria. In most other local areas, however, Almond's margin of victory was clear.

Throughout the area, Horace H. Edwards trailed third and Remmie L. Arnold fourth.

With all 112 precincts reporting, these unofficial Democratic primary results were reported in nearby northern Virginia: Arnold, 974; Battle, 11,616; Edwards, 1952; Miller, 13,368.

With nine precincts reporting in Alexandria, the vote was: Arnold, 337; Battle, 2230; Edwards, 425; Miller, 3550.

With all 27 precincts reporting in Arlington County, the vote was: Rrnold, 323; Battle, 4402; Edwards, 470; Miller 4789.

With all three wards reporting in Falls Church, the vote was: Arnold, 17; Battle, 351; Edwards, 48; Miller, 433.

In all 28 precincts in Fairfax County, Arnold got 190, Battle, 2379; Edwards, 496; Miller 3400.

Complete but unofficial returns from the 28 Loudoun County precincts gave Battle 1486 votes; Miller 762; Edwards 163, and Arnold 32.

In the 17 precincts in Prince William County, Arnold got 75, Battle, 768; Edwards, 350; Miller 432.

Winners Usually Backed

Except when native sons were in the race, the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax area has voted for the winners in Virginia gubernatorial primaries of the last 25 years.

In 1945, Governor Tuck defeated Moss A. Plunkett in all three areas, with his strongest vote coming from Arlington. Tuck was a 4 to 1 choice in Arlington; less than 2 to 1 in Alexandria; and 4 to 3 in Fairfax.

In the same 1945 election, Charles R. Fenwick took the three areas in his fight to become lieutenant governor, but lost the election to Lewis Preston Collins who is now seeking reelection.

Colgate Darden, jr., swept the area against no substantial opposition in 1941, as did James H. Price in 1937.

In 1933, George Peery became Governor, but he lost the nearby counties to W. Worth Smith, jr., brother of Representative Howard W. Smith. This was the only time in recent years that the winning candidate failed to carry the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax area.

Northern Virginia Vote Breaks Records

The Virginia gubernatorial primary vote in nearby northern Virginia broke some records yesterday in size.

In Arlington, where the final vote was expected to be more than 10,000, a new all-time high was set for primary voting. Highest previous primary vote did not exceed 7500.

In Alexandria, the primary vote, unofficially tallied at 6683, was a record for any State or local election, but did not equal past presidential totals.

In Fairfax County, the vote did not equal the 9600 cast in last fall's presidential campaign but the unofficial tab of about 6500 was well above usual primary figures.

Rain Swamps D. C. in Spots

Ingraham sts. nw., where a stalled automobile was covered above the window level. Basements on 5th st. were flooded to heights of from three to five feet.

A Capital Transit bus, attempting to avoid the high water on 5th st. left its regular route only to bog down on 7th st. near Hamilton st.

Earl Columbus, of 5237 5th st. nw., a long-time resident of the section, described yesterday's flood as the worst since 1943. His basement was under three feet of water, and his automobile, parked in the rear of his house, was covered to the window level.

In the Columbus automobile, and ruined by the water seeping in, were several prizes which Mrs. Columbus, hospital chairman of Potomac Post VFW Auxiliary, had purchased for a party for Walter Reed Hospital patients.

Flood waters rose to a height of nearly five feet in the basement of Mrs. Agnes Janney at 5239 5th st. nw. Her back yard was under more than four feet of water.

Lynch Noses Out Opponent In Late Fairfax Upset

In a "last precinct" upset, Edwin Lynch, veteran candidate for Democratic nomination for the Virginia House of Delegates to represent Fairfax County, apparently defeated his opponent, W. Lewis Leigh.

Leigh had led throughout the counting of the county's 31 precincts, until the Annandale precinct reported a topheavy 382 for Lynch and 67 for Leigh.

That revised the totals to an unofficial 3150 for Lynch and 3015 for Leigh, as tabulated at Fairfax. Another unofficial compilation made the margin slightly wider, giving Lynch 3221 to Leigh's 3020. John J. McLaughlin was a poor third with 397.

Douglas A. Clark won the race for Republican nomination for the Fairfax House seat with 221 votes to 110 for Kent Godfrey.

The Fairfax County House of Delegates race was by far the liveliest and most important local contest in nearby Virginia. Falls Church is in Fairfax County.

Not only was it the sole contest for so high a post in the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax area; it was also the first time Republicans in the area had held a primary to select their nominee for Delegate.

A large part of the campaign consisted of having all five candidates—three Democrats and two Republicans—speak from the same platform. But toward the end it was every man for himself.

For the last 12 years the race for the House of Delegates seat has been the most exciting, and usually closest, Fairfax County contest. And each of these six contests has involved either Lynch or Francis Pickens Miller, the candidates for Governor.

In 1937 Miller won the Democratic primary and election without too much trouble. Two years later he was unopposed in the primary, but beat Republican Richard R. Farr in the election by only 100 votes.

Farr defeated Miller by 188 votes out of 3000 cast in 1941. But the day the General Assembly met Farr died.

Lynch first ran in 1941 and was defeated about 2 to 1 by the present Delegate, Robert J. McCandlish. In 1943, with McCandlish in the Navy, Lynch won his seat by 350 votes.

McCandlish took their third match in 1947 by one vote after an unofficial count showed them tied up at 2853 apiece. This year McCandlish decided not to run.

Alexandria

In Alexandria municipal races, incumbent Charles A. Callahan, Commissioner of Revenue, won over his opponent, William E. Sellers. He had nearly a 2-to-1 lead.

J. Frank Moriarty, incumbent city sergeant, likewise was an easy victor over Walter Hugh Travers in the same compilation, though not by as wide a margin as Callahan.

Unofficial returns from Alexandria city's nine voting places showed:

For commissioner of revenue—Charles A. Callahan, 4063; William E. Sellers, 2221.

For city sergeant—J. Frank Moriarty, 3738; Walter Hugh Travers, 2551.

James R. Carver was winner in a justice of the peace contest in the First Ward, and Michael P. Frasca, incumbent, in the Fifth Ward.

With Alexandria's affected polling, complete unofficial Democratic primary totals for Justice of the Peace in two contested wards were: First Ward—James R. Carver, 448; William Hobart Little, 196; F. C. Pullin, 355. First Ward—Michael P. Frasca, incumbent, 889; Francis C. Treger, 802.

Unopposed for nomination as justice of the peace in the Second and Third Wards, respectively, were Thomas M. Ennis and Charles D. Welch.

Arlington

No local offices were contested in Arlington County in yesterday's primary election, but three officeholders won Democratic nomination by acclamation.

They were State Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm and County Board member Basil M. De Lashmutt.

Massenburg Defeated By Wilson, Miller Man

Speaker of the Virginia House, G. Alvin Massenburg, an organization-backed candidate, was beaten by Victor P. Wilson, a Newport News attorney and adherent of Francis Pickens Miller.

The vote in that First District race was 3149 for Wilson to 2973 for Massenburg. Massenburg, a member of the House since 1925, conceded defeat.

Massenburg also is chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and a leader in the anti-Truman maneuver before last November.

Ex-Navy Officer Dies; Wife Awaits Caesarian Section

A former naval officer who promised to visit his young wife this afternoon after she undergoes a Caesarian operation collapsed and died last night a few minutes after he left her at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

According to police, he is Hugh McCormick Hayden, 28, of 3603 Norton pl. nw. His wife is Caroline Davison Hayden, 27, daughter of the late Gen. D. A. Davison.

The couple have a 3-year-old son, who was left with his grandmother while Hayden visited his wife. When he returned for the child, he collapsed and died in his mother-in-law's home.

Relatives said the former officer had been retired from the Navy recently because of a heart condition.

War Pension Hike Is Voted by House

With a vote of 354 to 0, the House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a bill raising veterans' pensions and disability payments by more than 112 million dollars a year.

The measure sailed through despite objections from the White House. The Budget Bureau informed Congress that the legislation was not in accord with President Truman's program.

The first year's cost was estimated at $112,597,300 by the Veterans Administration. It made no estimate of the cost in subsequent years.

VA estimated that 2,024,000 veterans of the first and second world wars and of the Spanish-American War would be affected by a section increasing disability and death payments.

Principal provisions of the bill:

Disability and death compensation rates and basic rates for service-connected disability would be increased. The rate for total disability would go up from $138 a month to $150, with corresponding raises for partial disability. The monthly payments to widows and dependent children of wartime casualties would be increased from the present $100 for a widow with one child to $105. Payment for each additional child would be $25 instead of $15.

World War I veterans with disabilities legally presumed to be service-connected would get full compensation instead of the present 75 per cent.

Dependents of veterans with service-connected 50 per cent disabilities would get additional compensation benefits. At present such payments are made only if the disability is 60 per cent.

Where veterans are receiving compensation for tuberculosis, full benefits, would be paid for two years after the disease is fully arrested. 50 per cent benefits for an additional four years, and 30 per cent for five years more.

Under existing regulations, the full payments are made for six months after the presumed cure, then half-payments for 4 years and 30 per cent for the next five years.

Military Lists Unity Moves

trol" of the military forces. Now he has only "general control."

(3) The measure establishes the post of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He will be a military man, vested with the highest rank in the services. But he will not be a "chief of staff" with military command.

(4) A civilian "business manager," or comptroller, will be named to accomplish sweeping budgetary and fiscal reforms in the military services.

(5) Three assistant secretaries of defense will be named—one of them the comptroller.

Vinson yesterday called attention to three provisions written into the bill at the instance of House members and which place restrictions on Johnson's authority.

One requires that the latter report to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees before issuing any major consolidation order. Vinson declared that the Secretary must "justify" his action to them.

Another requires the Secretary to make semiannual instead of annual reports to Congress. A third permits the civilian and military chiefs of the Army, Navy and Air Force to go over Johnson's head to Congress at any time.

Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.), ranking GOP member of the Armed Services Committee, also indorsed the bill, but declared he was "filled with doubts." He declared it a "shocking thing" and "evidence of declining morality in Government" to grant additional powers "to a man under investigation." He referred to the forthcoming B-36 investigation, which will consider, among other things, "ugly rumors" linking Secretary Johnson with Air Force bomber orders.

Another Republican member, Sterling Cole (N. Y.), declared the bill would bring a "merger" of the armed forces, and said the claims of huge savings were a "fraud."

Secretary Johnson gave no indication what the "10 or 12" unification orders and announcements already prepared involved. Others, however, indicated that some involved appointments of personnel to new posts.

The consolidation of all sea transport under the Navy had been long under study. Initially, under yesterday's directive, the "MSTS" will operate 223 troop transports, cargo ships and tankers. The present Navy Transportation Service will assign 94 vessels to the new service—9 transports, 12 cargo craft and 73 tankers.

From the Army will come 129 ocean-going craft—including 66 transports, 58 cargo transports and 5 tankers. In addition, some 191 privately owned vessels under Army charter will come under jurisdiction of the new service.

Unlike the Military Air Transport Service—set up more than a year ago under the Air Force by merging the Air Force and Navy air transport units—the new Military Sea Transport Service will not be a joint outfit. MATS has USAF and Navy people at all levels and planes assigned by both services. While some Army Transportation Corps officers will be lent to the new MSTS immediately, all except liaison officers must be returned by next April.

Large groups of civilian personnel of the Army Transportation Corps, however, will be transferred to the Navy. They included not only clerks here, but also the Civil Service crews of Army-operated vessels. The latter will continue to man the ships taken over by the Navy, under present plans, officials said.

One seagoing transport is merged. Each service will continue to operate its own port facilities. Harbor and inland waterway vessels likewise remain with their present service. Naval vessels classed as combat craft—assault transports, etc—and those required for the mobile support of the fleet will remain under Navy control, independent of the new MSTS.

Farcical '47 Building Curbs Let In Race Tracks, Says Woods

By The Associated Press

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods yesterday said two race tracks got a construction permit from his agency not because of influence but because postwar building controls were a "farce."

Woods spent 90 minutes closeted with the Senate's "5 per cent" probers. He told newsmen their questions included the dealings of his office with James V. Hunt, Washington "management counselor," in these two matters:

1. The race track jobs. Woods has said he understands a client paid Hunt $15,000 for his services in 1947 in getting a construction clearance for one of the tracks, Foxborough, near Boston. The other was Tanforan, near San Francisco.

2. Hunt's request that he (Woods) go to the Commerce Department to try to get steel scrap shipped from Europe to this country.

Representative Hebert (D., La.) announced he will call Stanley J. Cummings, executive secretary of the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers, Inc., before a House Armed Services Subcommittee today to ask him about a meeting with Hunt.

Hebert is chairman of a subcommittee which is investigating policies of the armed forces on supplying officers with uniforms.

Cummings will be questioned in a closed session, Hebert said. He will be asked about a report that Hunt once offered to try to get Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, suspended head of the Army Quartermaster Corps, to reverse an order affecting the purchase of officers' uniforms. Hunt asked a $25,000 fee, Hebert said, but the uniform manufacturers refused to pay it.

The order in question would change the traditional system under which Army officers buy their own uniforms directly from retailers or tailors. Its intent is to have the Quartermaster General procure officers' uniforms and then resell them to officers at cost. Operation of the order has been held up temporarily pending a study by the House subcommittee.

Woods said he told the investigators what he had already reported—that he did tackle the Commerce Department, but didn't accomplish much. He went, he said, because scrap was sorely needed for the manufacture of soil pipe used in home construction.

The name of John Maragon, another key figure in the investigation, entered the race track questioning, Woods told reporters. Maragon's name showed up on a list of persons who attended a meeting with housing officials on the Tanforan case, the expediter said. Otherwise, he added, he had no information that Maragon was involved.

Woods' meeting was with the staff of the Senate's Special Investigating Committee. The committee wants to learn about persons who charge businessmen 5 per cent—or some other fee—for helping them get Federal contracts. The practice is deplored officially but is not illegal.

Woods said the questioning was friendly, adding, "I told them influence wasn't needed under the building rules. Once you had the regulations, anybody could find the loopholes."

The housing official, in a weekend interview, had disclosed that Hunt asked for favorable consideration of the construction job at Tanforan. At that time Federal clearance was required for all building. Hunt also "sought our opinion," he said, as to whether Foxborough could qualify for a clearance. The agency advised him that the track was eligible.

Early Adjournment Proposal Rejected

In Committee

East-West War Brews On GOP Head

By D. Harold Oliver

Republicans appeared headed yesterday toward an east-west clash over the chairmanship of their national committee. Early arrivals for a Thursday committee meeting talked insistently of selecting a Western man, rather than an Easterner.

The one-day session was called to name a successor to Representative Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania. He says he is resigning to bring harmony to the faction-torn party.

Guy George Gabrielson, New Jersey committeeman and lawyer-industrialist, seemed to be the man to beat. The question was: With whom?

Westerners came up with these names:

Senator Harry Cain, Washington; A. T. (Bert) Howard, Nebraska; Arthur E. Summerfield, Michigan; Axel J. Beck, South Dakota, and Harry Darby, Kansas. The last three are members of the committee and there is considerable sentiment for picking the new chairman from the membership.

Friends of Gabrielson claimed he had more than 50 of the committee's 105 votes behind him. New Jersey Senators Hendrickson and H. Alexander Smith indorsed him yesterday along with Governor Alfred E. Driscoll.

But Senator Martin (R., Pa.), an original [illegible] thinks there is "strong sentiment among committee members to pick a Western man."

Chairmanship Choices Boosted by 2 States

Nebraska Republicans yesterday opened a drive to put over "Bert" Howard for the Republican national chairmanship, using mimeographed bulletins to impress members of the committee with his virtues.

Bulletin No. 1—others were promised—said that Howard had the "know-how" to weld the GOP into a harmonious and hard-hitting team for 1950. It also emphasized that the chief battleground next year would be Howard's part of the country, the Middle West.

The South Dakota delegation in Congress described its candidate, National Committeeman Axel J. Beck, as a man of "extraordinary personality," free of commitments to any presidential candidates, and possessed of a grass-roots knowledge of the problems of the farmers.

Senate Democratic leaders yesterday turned down a Republican proposal to set up a legislative timetable which would enable Congress to adjourn in the near future.

Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said after a Democratic policy meeting it would be "useless" to draw up a list of "must" bills now because there is so much unfinished business before the Senate.

Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) has suggested clearing the way for early adjournment by preparing a list of "must" bills and putting a limit on debate. Republican leaders later scheduled a conference of the party Senators on Thursday to consider the adjournment issue.

Democratic leaders opposed such action, it was said, because they are afraid it would expose them to heavy pressure from groups pushing measures not included on the list.

The Senate still must act on a huge stack of unfinished money bills for various Government agencies; minimum wage, reciprocal trade, foreign arms aid, farm legislation and displaced persons. The House calendar is in somewhat better shape.

Lucas earlier interrupted debate on the Independent Offices appropriation bill to plead with his colleagues to speed up consideration of the money measures.

"We are five weeks behind on appropriations bills and it looks like we will take two weeks more," he said. "We'll have to get them out of the way before we can even discuss adjournment."

overall sum of $5,400,000 for the reconstruction job—an outright appropriation of $2,000,000 and a contract authorization of $3,400,000.

How long it will take to underpin the White House walls and virtually rebuild the interior is debatable. Estimates have ranged from 18 months to two years or longer.

In the meantime, President Truman and his family will live in Blair House, across the street on Pennsylvania ave. The First Family moved out of the White House following the 1948 election after the mansion had been adjudged "one of the worst firetraps in the country." Mr. Truman continues to use his offices in the west wing of the White House.

Traditional and Sentiment

In the debate over what was to be done about the White House, the Chief Executive agreed that it would be much cheaper to put up a new house. He pointed out, however, that tradition and sentiment were powerful arguments in favor of preserving the old one, and he made it clear that he hoped it would be preserved.

The commission which ordered the reprieve yesterday, thus making it possible for Washington tourists to see the original White House for a century or more to come, will continue its meetings. It must approve the plans for reconstruction and let the contracts for the actual work.

Besides Senator McKellar, the chairman, the commission is made up of Douglas William Orr of Connecticut, former president of the American Institute of Architects, who is deputy chairman; Senator Martin, a Republican of Pennsylvania; Representatives Rabut (D., Mich.), and Keefe (R., Wis.), and Richard E. Dougherty of New York, a vice president of the New York Central Railroad and president of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

McCain Honor Approved

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday approved a bill authorizing the President to issue a posthumous commission of admiral for the late John Sidney McCain. McCain served as a vice admiral in the Pacific under Admiral William F. Halsey.

Health in U. S. Reported Better Than Ever Before

New York, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Americans are healthier than they ever have been, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., reported today.

The company's statistical department said general health conditions, as reflected in the mortality rate, "were better in the first half of 1949 than ever before."

Low death rates were reported for influenza, diphtheria, pneumonia, whooping cough, syphilis, diarrhea, tuberculosis, appendicitis, enteritis, and diseases of childbirth.

Clear Path Seen for Clark And McGrath

By The Associated Press

The double appointment moving Attorney General Tom Clark to the Supreme Court and Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) into the Justice Department seemed today to have a clear path to Senate approval. President Truman yesterday sent their nominations to the Senate.

But the backwash may produce conflicting bids by Senator Stennis (D., Miss.) and Senator Kerr (D., Okla.) for a coveted place on the Senate's tax-handling Finance Committee. Stennis is a States Rights supporter; Kerr an administration backer.

Whoever McGrath's successor in the Senate is, he will have to go to the bottom of the Democratic list in the Senate in committee assignments. Other Senators may shift committees to fill the vacancies which will be created by McGrath's resignation after he is confirmed for attorney general.

McGrath, who will resign his post as Democratic National Chairman as soon as he is confirmed, will leave vacancies on the Finance, Judiciary and District of Columbia committees.

His chairmanship of the latter group, involving the unofficial title as "Mayor" of Washington, is expected to go to Senator Neely (D., W. Va.).

Senators said the Finance post, however, may involve Stennis, who didn't support President Truman in the last campaign, and Kerr, who did.

Kerr sought membership on the Finance Committee when the Democrats organized the Senate last January. Others with longer service records crowded him out but he is expected to bid for the vacancy.

Stennis, however, has served in the Senate 14 months longer than Kerr. By seniority rules he could claim the place over Kerr.

Even with McGrath as a member, Administration supporters have been in the minority on the tax-policy-making group.

country and those abroad will not be affected.

That will force servicemen stationed at big city posts to pay regular retail prices for food and other groceries. Army commissaries now are required to sell such items at cost. The Navy permits a small mark-up in prices.

While the agreement does not have the force of law, the armed forces have been warned that legislation will be introduced if the services fail to live up to their bargain.

A subcommittee which originally negotiated the agreement began an investigation of military commissaries and stores after private business groups complained the services were "actively competing with private business."

Prices 20 Per Cent Under

Such groups as the Retail Merchants Association and the American Retail Federation argued that their members were unable to meet the prices of military stores which had no overhead, paid no State or Federal taxes, and collected no excise or sales taxes.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Philip J. Philbin (D., Mass.) found that the average item could be purchased for 20 per cent less in a service store than in a private store. In many cases, it said, the reduction was much greater.

It also criticized the fact that servicemen could place special orders for expensive jewelry, furs, luggage, toilet preparations and other items not regularly carried by military stores.

The new regulations ban the sale of such goods in service stores if "adequate" retail outlets are available. They also will be required to collect Federal excise taxes in their prices.

The subcommittee's report said the lack of overhead expenses permitted the service stores to sell their wares so cheaply that there have been cases where servicemen "have openly accused reputable businessmen of dishonest operations."

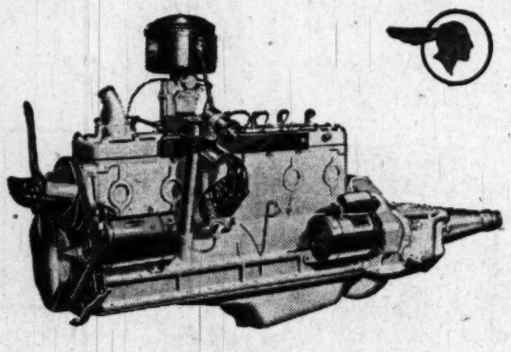
You ought to be driving a '49 PONTIAC

A Product of General Motors

Powered by the World's Sweetest Engine!



When you're at the wheel of a big, handsome Pontiac, there's a feeling of sheer satisfaction words can scarcely describe.

Your car is powered by the world's sweetest engine—wonderfully smooth and quiet, instantly responsive to the accelerator, and packed with ample power for every driving need. Whether you choose Pontiac's great straight eight or its equally famous six-cylinder companion, you get performance which is not only extraordinarily enjoyable but which also carries with it the added satisfaction of exceptional gas and oil economy.

It is a matter of common knowledge that fine performance has long been an outstanding characteristic of Pontiac cars.

The fundamental L-head design of Pontiac engines has won the approval of more than two million owners. Many of them have passed the 100,000 mile mark without a major service operation. Yet, thanks to constant development and improvement, the power plant of your 1949 Pontiac is as modern as tomorrow's sun.

Why not come in today and learn that truly wonderful performance is just another reason for wanting this truly wonderful car?

Seizure Move in Hawaiian Strike Is Killed

Honolulu, Aug. 2 (AP).—An attempt to give Hawaii's government power to seize stevedoring companies involved in the 94-day-old dock strike was killed in the Territorial Senate today.

By a vote of 8 to 7, the Senate rejected an amendment introduced by Senator Herbert K. H. Lee, Democrat. It would have substituted the seizure plan for a tough bill passed yesterday by the House.

The Senate then prepared for a final vote Wednesday on the House bill, which would put the territorial government in the stevedoring business.

The House bill then must go back to the House for agreement on minor changes. Governor Ingram M. Stainback opposes the House bill because it bans the hiring both of strikers and management employes.

Lee's defeated amendment provided that the government could seize struck dock firms for 90 days. Both management personnel and strikers would have been employed by the government.

If the 90 days expired without an agreement, the government could have taken over the stevedoring firms permanently. Senator Lee argued this would act as compulsion on both sides to settle.

Bridges Defends $35,000 Pay As Mine Union Fund Trustee

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) yesterday said he earns every cent of his $35,000 salary as public trustee of the United Mine Workers' Welfare Fund.

A substantial part of the salary, he said, goes to pay for the private counsel he has retained to advise him as a trustee because of the numerous lawsuits filed in connection with it.

There are other expenses and incidental services in connection with the job, he said, and added that "only a part of the over-all payment comes to me as compensation."

He told reporters he did not consider a $35,000 annual salary for acting as trustee of a 100 million dollar fund an unfair compensation.

No Bar in Law

Senate officials said there is no law to keep a Senator from accepting a salary from another source so long as it has no connection with the Government. Many mmebers of the Senate do in fact have private law practices from which they also derive revenue.

Political experts at the Capitol said yesterday that disclosure of the salary from the UMW fund might be seized upon by Bridges' political opponents if he were slated for reelection in the near future. But Bridges was reelected last November and has six years to serve.

Bridges pointed out that the rate of compensation for trustees was established before he became one in April, 1948.

Both he and Miss Josephine Riche, director of the UMW fund, said the rate of pay was determined while the United States Government was operating the coal mines. Bridges said Capt. N. H. Collisson, who served as Government trustee during this period, received the same salary.

Bridges said the welfare fund itself provides money for legal counsel in connection with suits and injunctions brought against the board. He added, however, that he had personally felt it advisable to retain his own legal counsel.

"When you handle $100,000,000," Bridges declared, "you've got to do it with care. The payment I received is in line with the responsibilities involved."

The legal expenses he incurs, he said, account for much of his salary.

"What with injunctions and suits being brought against me as a trustee, and general attacks, I wouldn't stay 30 seconds if I didn't receive payment for the best available counsel and advice to guide me personally every step of the way," he said.

Bridges said he took the job on a temporary basis and still regards it as temporary.

Blue Ridge Bus Force Taking Strike Vote

Hagerstown, Md., Aug 2 (AP).—Bus drivers and maintenance employes of the Blue Ridge transportation company started taking a strike vote tonight in their dispute with management over higher wages.

The vote will continue tomorrow so drivers out on runs and maintenance men on the various shifts will have a chance to ballot.

Involved are about 175 members of the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employes.

The employes are asking an increase of 20 cents an hour for drivers, who now average $1.40. They also want three-week vacations, instead of two, and other benefits.

Blue Ridge operates a main route from Washington and Baltimore to Pittsburgh, with branch lines to several communities in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Also confirmed were appointments as United States marshals of Jones Floyd for western Arkansas, and John S. Denise, sr., for western Washington.

Dockworkers Battle Police; Women Faint

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 2 (U.P.). Two hundred police clashed today with 1500 docks workers in the heart of Sydney's shopping district in a 30-minute battle which surged around hysterical women shoppers.

No serious injuries were reported, but scores including the women shoppers were knocked down, punched and beaten.

The disturbance followed a decision by 4000 wharf workers to strike for one day because shipping companies wanted to eliminate "appearance money," apparently as result of losses incurred by the six-week-old coal strike.

"Appearance money" is paid to wharf workers who show up at hiring halls each morning, even though they are not called for work. The shipping companies had applied to an arbitration court for suspension of these bonuses.

Fifteen hundred angry wharf workers assembled at the docks this morning and marched eight abreast toward the arbitration court. They were approaching the government building housing Prime Minister Joseph B. Chifley's Sydney office when police closed in.

Women shoppers caught in the melee fainted or were manhandled in the confusion. Entrances to department stores were jammed with screaming women.

Bogus Bills Lead To Arrest in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 2 (NYHT.).—Michael Maione, former convict and former bootlegger, was routed out of a sound sleep in his Bronx bed by Secret Service agents at noon today and charged with being the boss of a combine which has passed about one million dollars in bogus $10 and $20 bills in the New York area in the last year.

The 38-year-old Maione, better known in the underworld as Mike Rosy, was held in $50,000 bail.

In addition to being the leader of East Coast money counterfeiters, he also was in charge of selling at least $500,000 worth of spurious 3-cent stamps, according to Roy M. Cohn, Assistant United States attorney.

Maione gave his business as juke-box operator.

"There is no doubt that Maione was top dog in the East," Cohn said. "Indications are that he was working for a counterfeit syndicate in Chicago. He and his henchmen were flooding this area with phony $10 and $20 notes in unprecedented quantities during the last 12 months.

Most of the funny money was sold by Maione, Cohn said, in the form of Series G, the price being $8 to $15 good dollars for $100 worth of spurious money. Chicago uses Series G. When prospective buyers asked for Series B, which normally circulates in New York, Maione reportedly charged $20 for $100 in home-made money.

Indignant lover . . .

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 2 (U.P.).—A University of California coed, shot in the brain by her wealthy Iranian lover when she decided to return to her husband, was fighting for her life today.

Both her husband and the Iranian, who sobbingly admitted shooting the pretty brunette, professed their love for her.

The shooting came after a three-sided "love conference" between Mrs. Judith Korb Sher, 26; her husband, 26-year-old graduate student, and Parvix Daryoush, 27, son of a prominent journalist of Mesher, Iran. All are students.

Mrs. Sher was still unconscious, but hospital attendants said her condition was "a slight bit improved" and that she may recover.

Daryoush told police, "I still love her, but I couldn't stand it when she kept changing her mind."

Sher said he and his wife, who were married two years ago, had been "having some difficulties," but insisted "my wife and I are still in love." He said she told him she was in love with another man, but agreed yesterday to take a "trial vacation" with him in hopes of patching up their difficulties.

Fire Prevention Week Set by Truman Oct. 9

President Truman yesterday called upon the Nation to observe the week beginning October 9 as "Fire Prevention Week." He said in a proclamation that he wanted all Americans during that week to "undertake a year-round campaign against destructive fires in our homes and in communities."

Entreaty Not to Kill Ignored In Shooting, Witness Testifies

A bended-knee plea, "thou shalt not kill," failed to stop a former Ironworkers Union official from shooting a colleague, a District Coroner's Jury was told yesterday.

The plea was made by the landlady in the victim's home, the jurors were told, and brushed aside by the enraged intruder.

After almost an hour's testimony by seven witnesses, the jury ordered 42-year-old Clarence Reynolds, 2804 Myrtle, ave. ne., held for grand jury action in the Monday evening shooting death of A. Vance Bowling, 45, 1838 3d st. ne.

Mrs. Clara Norcross, manager of the boarding house in which the shooting took place, told the jury that Reynolds knocked on her door and said "I've come to kill Bowling." Then, she said, he failed to heed bended-knee entreaties and her reminder "Thou shalt not kill."

On the verge of tears several times, she said Reynolds also mentioned arguments he had with Bowling over the past two years and testified she saw a gun stuck in his belt. Mrs. Norcross said she became scared, picked up her baby from his crib and fled barefoot into a neighbor's apartment. The neighbor called police.

Six other witnesses testified in an hour-and-a-half hearing at District Morgue. They said the accused had begun drinking Monday morning, had become involved in a fight with 210-pound Bowling, and had come out second best. Reynolds, short in stature and weighing about 165 pounds, appeared at Bowling's rooming house around 9 p. m. and announced his intentions to kill Bowling.

The basis of the fight, the jury was told, was apparently the union election on July 7, in which Bowling campaigned against Reynolds, whom he blamed for keeping him off several construction jobs.

retary of Local 5 of the Ironworkers' Union, declined to make any statements to the jury, and was not represented by an attorney.

Blast Scares Mickey Cohen

Los Angeles, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—An unexplained explosion blew a hole eight inches wide in a driveway across the street from Mickey Cohen's radar-protected home today, and the little mobster met investigators at the door with a gun in his trembling hand.

Police were not sure whether the blast was the second unsuccessful attempt in two weeks to rub out the dapper little racket boss. They thought possibly it was the work of pranksters, who have sent officers scurrying to Cohen's house repeatedly since he was wounded by shotgun fire July 20 outside a Sunset Strip cafe.

Another development in Los Angeles' vice investigation was surrender of retired Police Chief C. B. Horrall on a perjury indictment returned last week in the wake of a grand jury investigation of alleged underworld payoffs.

Like the four officers indicted with him, Horrall blamed the charge on politics. He said Cohen and Brenda Allen, vice queen, whose charges touched off the probe, cooperated "with the political enemies of Mayor Fletcher Bowron in trying to discredit the police department."

The idea of "self-service" seems to be the coming thing. One of the most popular eating-places in town is a new cafeteria that just opened here. I had lunch there the other day and was amazed how many people were served in the short time I was there.

It reminded me of another kind of service most of us use today—party-line telephone service. I was talking with Cy Stubbs, who works for the telephone company, and he told me if it weren't for party lines, thousands of folks would still be waiting for telephone service. He said that party lines mean more service for more people sooner. That's one reason why it's so important that folks continue to use their party lines "sharingly."

Adjournment

"When Congress will rise," Jefferson once complained, "no mortal can tell." Similar complaints are now coming from many congressional lips. The law says that adjournment shall come not later than the last day in July "unless otherwise provided by Congress." In an effort to satisfy at least part of the terrific demands upon it, Congress has provided otherwise, and if all the bills on the "must" calendar are to be disposed of, Majority Leader Lucas' expression of hope that the wind-up may come as early as Labor Day appears to be very optimistic.

The experiences of the last two sessions suggests that it was a mistake to fix the adjournment date at the end of July. The business of legislating for a Government that is spending more than 40 billion dollars a year and is constantly inaugurating new activities cannot be completed in the first seven months of the year, as was contemplated under the Congressional Reorganization Act. Jefferson's complaint that the length of congressional sessions was "not from the quantity but from the dilatoriness of business" is no longer true. Anyone who has been on Capitol Hill with his eyes open knows that it is a hive of industry. Of course, a great deal of time is wasted in unnecessary bickering, but politics and human nature being as they are, we doubt that these controversies can be substantially curtailed.

Congress ought to recognize the fact that its duties as the board of directors for big government will not permit it to be away from Washington for five months every year. That being the case, it could properly adjourn for the summer in the odd years and take up its burden again in the early fall. In the even years the fall months must necessarily be reserved for campaigning. But when there are no political campaigns to be waged, it doesn't make sense to keep legislative noses on the grindstone throughout Washington's nerve-wracking summer so as to permit adjournment in the fall. Even the quality of legislation might be improved in some measure if Congress would give up the idea of feverish cramming in the hot-weather months, whenever that is possible, and come back for renewal of their grind some time after Labor Day.

Bridges' Welfare

When Senator Bridges joined forces with John L. Lewis back in April, 1948, to activate the United Mine Workers' Welfare Fund a few hours before Mr. Lewis was to answer a contempt of court charge, a good many questions were asked about this strange teamwork. In the dispute over making the welfare fund effective, Mr. Lewis had called a Nation-wide coal strike. He had been cited for contempt for failure to obey a back-to-work order. Senator Bridges pulled the chestnuts out of the fire by accepting a place on the board of the welfare fund and agreeing in the small hours of the morning to a welfare plan which enabled Mr. Lewis to call off the strike with a saving of face just before his contempt of court was to be officially dealt with. Now it appears that Senator Bridges was acting under the lure of a $35,000 salary from the welfare fund.

The public is indebted for this information to Senator Sparkman, who questioned Miss Josephine Roche, director of the fund, at an inquiry before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. It is apparent, however, that many more questions need to be asked. What service does Senator Bridges render to earn this $35,000? We had supposed that the Government was paying for his full time at the rate of $12,500 (plus a $2500 expense allowance). If he is able to earn more than twice these sums on the side, his constituents will certainly be interested in knowing what is required of him. Certainly, too, they will wish to know how he can reconcile with his duty as a legislator the receipt of such a stipend from interests involved in many issues before Congress.

Of course, there is also the question of why such large salaries should be paid to trustees who have other substantial sources of income. Mr. Lewis, recognizing that his $50,000 salary from the UMW is enough, has refused to take the $35,000 voted him as a trustee. Why should not Ezra Van Horn, the operators' representative on the board, do likewise? Excessive payments to trustees will strengthen the demand for stricter regulation of union welfare funds than the Taft-Hartley Act now provides. But the burden of the explanation due falls upon Senator Bridges because he is a public servant. If his $35,000 a year is for the meager work he can do aside from his senatorial duties, it is a gross waste of funds needed for aid to aged and sick miners. If it takes into consideration his prestige and influence as a Senator, then it is a gross misuse of public office for private profit.

AEC And Congress

Transmitting to Congress the sixth semi-annual report of the Atomic Energy Commission, President Truman observed that "every American should know, within security limits, of the splendid progress which is being made in this huge undertaking." Unfortunately, the security limits are still construed in such a way as to make genuine, independent knowledge on this score impossible so far as the lay public is concerned. The AEC report offers assurances; it cannot present data or submit its specific accomplishments to scrutiny.

The report declares, among other things, that "new and more effective atomic weapons" are in production; that component parts of these weapons "are being produced on an industrial basis"; that "enormous tonnages" of very low-grade raw materials have been uncovered in this country; that there have been significant applications of atomic energy by-products to the healing arts. One cannot conclude that all these heartening assertions incontrovertibly refute Senator Hickenlooper's extravagant charge of "incredible mismanagement" in the AEC. They do, however, convey a sense that the atomic energy program is in the hands of serious and patriotic men fully aware of their tremendous responsibilities.

It is vitally important that the program, as the President put it, "continue to go forward with undiminished momentum and effectiveness." It can do this, under current conditions, only on a basis of cooperation with the wartime partners who shared in achieving the miracle of nuclear fission. The cooperation of these partners is needed, first, because now, as during the war, they possess scientific knowledge which can be an invaluable supplement to our own; second, because they share control of the high-grade raw materials indispensable to the production of atomic energy; third and most important of all, because any dissolution of this partnership would result in wasteful, senseless duplication and a rivalry of the most dangerous sort.

The President, recognizing the imperative need for cooperation with Britain and Canada, has undertaken, as a proper part of his executive function, to negotiate new agreements respecting the exchange of technical information and the allocation of raw materials. He advised Congress the other day that he would make no commitments respecting the disclosure of American secrets without congressional assent. The assurance was accepted by most of those who had been clamoring for legislation to tie the President's hands. But Senator Wherry, floor leader of the Republicans, seemed disappointed by this sensible, conciliatory move. He apparently preferred conflict to cooperation with the President even in this most sensitive aspect of national security and refused to let a potential political issue go unexploited. "Gentlemen's agreements between President Truman and members of Congress regarding atomic bomb secrets are not enough to satisfy the American people," he declared grandiloquently. And then, just to show that his understanding of the situation was no greater than his sense of propriety, he added, referring presumably to the recent conferences with British and Canadian authorities, "If existing law is adequate to guard the secrets, then why have these meetings been held?"

The meetings have been held because monopoly in the field of atomic energy is a myth. American security lies not in a hermit existence designed to preserve a dubious and certainly evaporating "secret" but in the maintenance of supremacy through intelligently coordinated use of the resources, facilities and scientific knowledge shared by the three wartime partners. In no area is isolationism so perilous as in this.

Historic Trust

Without debate the House has passed H. R. 5170, a bill introduced by Representative Peterson, to provide a "national trust" for the preservation of historic sites and monuments. In essence it supplements the Historic Sites Act of 1935 by permitting public participation in the effort to preserve for future generations some of the valuable "sites, buildings, and objects significant in American history and culture" that might otherwise be swallowed up by the onrushing torrent of "progress."

When progress presents itself in the guise of a gasoline station or hotdog stand in place of the house where some great American was born or in the middle of an historic battlefield, the decision is easy that progress should be turned aside. But the means are not always easy. The Federal Government, through the Department of the Interior, and the States and localities do what they can—or can afford.

But they cannot do everything that needs to be done in preserving the heritage of the past. And they should not. The national trust provides a technique for the public itself, without any cost at all to the Government, to play an important role in keeping American history alive and visible outside the covers of textbooks. For the trust, as its name implies, can receive gifts of property and funds, and manage in the public interest such historic sites and buildings as it may purchase or elect to receive as gifts.

The Peterson bill is a first and very impressive feather in the cap of the recently formed National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings. The unanimous approval given the bill, both in the House Public Lands Committee and on the floor, testify to the intrinsic worth of the scheme and encourage us to hope that the Senate will as quickly and wisely act on the measure.

Bailey Case

Whether Dorothy Bailey is guilty or innocent of the charges on account of which she was dismissed from her Government job, the manner in which her dismissal was brought about should be a subject of concern to all Americans.

Federal District Judge Alexander Holtzoff ruled last Thursday that the constitutional rights of Dorothy Bailey had not been violated, but characterized the procedure under which she had been judged guilty of disloyalty by the Loyalty Review Board as "unusual." Let us hope that it is indeed "unusual" and that it will remain so. But the vital point to bear in mind in considering this procedure is that, once countenanced, it is liable to become usual and general.

Miss Bailey was judged guilty of disloyalty on the basis of anonymous allegations. She was not only denied an opportunity to confront her accusers, she was denied even knowledge of their identity. Thus, her ability to refute the allegations by challenging the veracity or the disinterestedness of the sources was gravely impaired. Moreover, the identity of her accusers was not even known to the members of the Loyalty Board which judged her. The board simply accepted an assurance on the part of the FBI that these were reliable informants.

There is a real possibility that Miss Bailey was a target of malice. She was involved in a bitter fight within the United Public Workers Union. Her counsel, Paul Porter, argued before the Loyalty Review Board that the allegation she was a Communist was "a result of malicious, irresponsible, reckless gossip which has no foundation whatsoever in fact and stems from an internecine union controversy that we shall develop." How could the board weigh the validity of this argument? A brief excerpt from the transcript of Miss Bailey's hearing before the board provides an astonishing answer.

> Chairman Richardson (in response to Mr. Porter's argument): I can only say to you that five or six of the reports come from informants certified to us by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as experienced and entirely reliable.
> Mr. Porter: We would like to have their names, and I would challenge any one of them to state it publicly in a non-privileged form . . . Mr. Chairman, would we be privileged to obtain at least this much information? Those informants which are judged reliable by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, have they been active in the Federal Workers Union activity?
> Chairman Richardson: I haven't the slightest knowledge as to who they were or how active they have been in anything.

Later, Mr. Porter asked if the allegations against Miss Bailey had been made under oath. Chairman Richardson replied, "I don't think so." This is a procedure which does violence to elementary and long-settled standards of fair play. It is a procedure which makes any Federal employe liable to irreparable injury at the hands of a hostile or even an innocently mistaken informant.

Judge Holtzoff says that the Government does not violate the Constitution by dismissing an employe. That is indisputable. But it certainly does violate settled standards of decency and fairness when it dismisses an employe by a procedure of this kind.

The Supreme Court held in the Watson-Dodd-Lovett case that barring an individual from Government employment constitutes a punishment. Miss Bailey has not only been barred from Government employment, she has been stigmatized as disloyal and virtually barred from any employment anywhere. This is punishment of the severest sort. We feel very strongly that it ought not to have been administered without confrontation by the Loyalty Review Board—at least the chairman—of the FBI informants. After all, the board professes to be a review body.

Back To Nature

We haven't heard anything from the nudists during this abnormally hot summer, though it would seem to be the ideal time to press their cause. However, the men of this country, we learn, have started a spontaneous back-to-nature movement by sleeping in nothing at all or at most their underwear. This has alarmed the National Association of Shorts and Pajama Manufacturers, who have found in a survey that the average American man wears only one third of a pajama. While heat has encouraged the habit, the pajama men also blame the war, during which the attitude developed (aided by the War Production Board) that pajamas were a luxury. Now the pajama manufacturers have launched a campaign to get men back in pajamas. It will stress modesty, appearance, health and hygiene, and it will be aimed largely at women, who buy more than 50 per cent of men's pajamas. Hence it looks as if men, caught between the merchandisers and the women, may find their retreat to the primitive short-lived.

THE CITIES

Arrogant with pride the cities stand,
And know not how they grew up from the earth.
Heedless they are of death,
Forgetful of their birth.
While lost and hid away
'Neath ponderous mounds of clay
Slumber nine Troys that once were bright as they.
Beyond these granite or those marble walls,
And all the towers of Babylon and Rome;
Inherent in the early builder's craft,
Engraved eternally in rock and bone.
Behind all these, the present and the past,
Behind the cities and all history stands
The man with little brain but patient hands.

"When to Compromise"

The writer of your July 25 editorial, "When to Compromise," after expressing verbal agreement with Representative Barden that there can be no compromise of the principle which forbids "Federal tax money going to private schools," goes on to propose the use of Federal tax money for the purchase of "nonsectarian" textbooks and bus service for children attending parochial schools. The purchase of "nonsectarian" textbooks involves a major expenditure for private and parochial schools, since they are required by law to meet certain standards of general education, and therefore must teach the same "secular" subjects which are taught in public schools. Yet your editorial writer, who professes a belief in separation of church and state in the abstract, would have the Government make this very concrete—and by no means trivial—donation of taxpayers' money to nonpublic schools. The provision of free bus service would be a similarly unwarranted Government subsidy of private or parochial schools.

A monetary gift is not changed in character by being handed from the Federal Government to a State government to be handed over to a private or parochial school. A monetary gift is not changed in character because it is earmarked "for purchase of 'nonsectarian' textbooks" rather than "for purchase of 'sectarian' textbooks." It is no more reasonable or just for the Federal Government to pay for the purchase of "nonsectarian" textbooks or parochial school bus service than for the Federal Government to pay for the construction of parochial school gymnasiums or the purchase of organs for parochial school chapels.

Recreation Policy

I have followed with considerable interest reports and editorials in your paper regarding recreation facilities in the District, especially recent incidents involving nonsegregated use of certain swimming pools.

Apparently, from reports dated July 20 Secretary Krug has now agreed to the transfer of Federal recreation facilities in Washington to the District Recreation Board. This does not include the transfer of swimming pools which is still under discussion. I understand that this action was taken only after the Recreation Board amended its by-laws to delete references to segregated or designated facilities. If this is the case, Secretary Krug should be commended for acting in the highest tradition of a public servant charged with the duty of protecting the rights of all citizens. Whether or not such action was wise, however, notwithstanding the Recreation Board's change of its by-laws, remains to be seen. It is now up to the board to show that it, too, recognizes its responsibilities to all citizens, and that it will administer these facilities in a fair and impartial manner, and pursuant to Federal policy regarding public accommodations. Unfortunately, past conduct of the board in this respect leaves much to be desired.

In my opinion, the board's job would be considerably easier if it made a determined effort to explain to all citizens groups that it must of necessity administer these facilities in accordance with Federal policy regarding public accommodations, and that this policy recognizes no distinctions in race, religion, etc. If the board, itself, recognizes this fact, there should be no reason for further difficulty. The golf links, tennis courts, and swimming pools involved in this controversy are public property, the property of all the people. No one—Negro, white, Jew, or Gentile—has any right to exclusive use of these facilities. It should not be too difficult for the board and its employes to explain to those of us who do not wish to accept and use these accommodations as public property, to find accommodations elsewhere.

Without doubt, Mr. Krug, acting in behalf of the Federal Government, would have placed himself and his government in an extremely awkward position if he had accepted the original proposal of the Recreation Board for the administration of these facilities on a segregated basis.

Coal Research

Mr. Drew Pearson discloses in your July 21 issue the secret deal of John L. Louis and the coal operators, his recommendation and selection of a "coal czar" for the mine owners, the three-day work week, and investigations by Justice Department.

For five years we have been trying to induce Lewis and his board to permit the U. M. W. to create a large "coal research institute, to advance the research on coal and create new uses for coal and its products. We have ofered to give such an institute 20 patents now issued to me and my co-workers, who were the former Government "experts" in synthetic liquid fuels researches. Lewis has been given full information, the processes, the very cheap oil that can be produced from the coals generally throughout the Nation, the new inexhaustible source of coal gas of equal heating value to natural gas, the valuable chemical by-products and the smokeless fuel by-product that would eliminate forever the smoke of our cities.

Lewis will not cooperate although the coal miners want this project, and they have stated their wish to join with the scientists and technologists in creating these new industries, which will assure steadier employment in the coal mines and will establish many trade or vocational schools in the coal mining areas, also insure United States independence from foreign oil and assure clean atmosphere in our cities.

German Industry

George Seldes, editor of In Fact, recently reported on the attempt by A. M. G. officials and American businessmen to restore German industrial potential and place all industry into the hands of former Nazis.

Mr. Seldes listed three major complaints voiced by democratic forces in Germany against the A. M. G. and American businessmen. They are:

"International agreements have been scuttled because U. S. big business, convinced that the Reich can again become a source of sound investment and big profit, has moved in on German industry, bailing out their former partners, preventing transfer of industries to public ownership, blocking trust-busting moves, and reimposing the rule of the former cartelists to positions of high authority.

"Pressure on both Britain and France, both of them dependent on U. S. favors, has forced them to accept drastic cuts in reparations and to go along, against their wishes, with the high priority given the reconstruction of Nazi industry.

"The result of these policies has been a resurgence of anti-Semitism, a revival of militant nationalism, the formation of new Nazi parties, and a general defeat for democratic ideas and institutions."

"All Asia"

The stupidity of your July 30 editorial, dealing with China, slaps one in the face. First you wish not to intervene against the Communists; then you would employ "ways and means of enhancing his (Mao's) difficulties without military adventuring." You wish, in other words, to let this group win China, while at the same time insulting them in petty ways so as to insure their hostility towards us.

The real trouble with American policy has been this vascillation which has ended by prolonging the war and antagonizing both sides. It really makes little difference which side wins. What matters is that war should end, reconstruction begin, and that the new regime be our friends. The real criminals among our policy-makers are those who have both failed to support the Nationalists and failed to make friends with the Communists.

If the Communists are to win, then for heaven's sake let us not pursue a petty policy of vindictiveness. Every informed student of China knows that Mao's group is most amenable to cooperation with us. They could be drawn away from whatever faint ties to Russia they have, far more easily than Tito. In any event, if we are going to concede them China, what on earth is the sense of not trying, at least, to get on good terms with them?

R. N. STROMBERG.

Police Uniforms

During the siege of hot weather, an article appeared in one of the papers that the heat had put several policemen on the sick list. It further stated that some park policemen had unbuttoned their shirt collars and rolled up their shirt sleeves to keep cool, to avoid being overcome with the terrible heat. It was stated that such action invited disciplinary measures.

Though policemen are men of good strong physical makeup, they can be subject to prostration from heat the same as others. Why not revise some of the rules for policemen, and be humane?

Taking Stock Of College

By Malvina Lindsay

Graduates' Judgment

MOST PERSONS think they would do it somewhat differently if they had the chance to go to college again. Hence there is widespread stock-taking of higher education. One recent inquiry in that line shows what 30,000 women college graduates now think of their education.

Their response has some bearing on the widely debated question: Are women being educated to become successful men? But much of this appraisal could as well apply to men's education. It is that of human beings considering how they should best be fitted for today's confusing and rapidly changing world.

The response to the inquiry, which was made by the American Association of University Women, was phenomenal. A questionnaire was merely inserted in the organization's Journal. Almost one third of the membership answered it—laboring seriously over the replies.

TWO YEARS ago an argument raged at an A. A. U. W. convention over whether college girls were getting the education for life they needed. Dr. Constance Warren, president emeritus of Sarah Lawrence College, proposed that the answer be put up to those who had had the chance to test their education against life. Hence the A. A. U. W. asked its members as to what ways they thought their education had been of value, and what changes they would suggest.

Dr. Margaret Mead, anthropologist, analyzed the results for the association. These showed, first, that the respondents, almost to a woman, were extremely glad they had gone to college. What they had learned there had been of great help to them they said. Yet—they were ready to suggest some changes.

Most of the jury seemed to feel that what college should do for one today was to open a lot of doors and give glimpses down paths that could be pursued later.

There was general agreement college should prepare for community participation and world citizenship. But, as Dr. Mead pointed out, this raised the question as to whether colleges should be content merely to open wider vistas, or also to prepare people concretely for working on a local level by such techniques as public speaking, committee management, getting along with people.

There was also strong feeling that college should equip one to earn a living—at least in a general way, though some advocated vocational training—that it should offer some kind of insurance against dependence and want. Yet at the same time it should awaken and develop cultural interests, give students the chance to begin in college the things that would aid personality development later. In Dr. Mead's words "there was enormous feeling that if you don't start things in college you never will."

MOST OF the graduates questioned wanted more practice and less theory in teaching—more learning by doing, as in such matters as child psychology, community work, foreign languages. College they felt should not merely open doors to paths but give students a little push down the paths.

These college women corroborated what virtually every person feels who looks back on his or her education—that the teacher is what counts.

They wanted teachers who, as Dr. Mead put it, would "love their pupils first and their subject matter second."

This jury also generally lined up for more education to fit women for their special roles in life. It thought they should acquire in college the skills for being wives and mothers.

This much of the response seemed to support Dr. Lynn T. White's controversial speech at the A. A. U. W. convention two years ago in which he assailed present day education for women on the ground it was keyed to masculine standards. Dr. White, president of Mills College, has since continued the crusade to give women a more specialized education. Recently he declared that this country's universities were "permeated with medieval ideas descended from the training for a masculine, celibate clergy."

Yet the opponents of Dr. White, who maintain that both men and women should be educated as "human beings," with the wide range of the liberal arts and the professions kept open to women, and the proposed training in personal, family and social values extended to men as well as women, also find some support in this inquiry. For its primary demand is that college open to its students as many doors as possible into the increasingly complex world they will face.

Annapolis Hospital

In behalf of the board of managers and campaign executive committee in the successful $350,000 building fund campaign to enlarge Emergency Hospital, I wish to thank you for the part you and your paper have played in this campaign.

The fact that this campaign has been largely oversubscribed can be attributed in no small measure to your cooperation. Many people, who otherwise would not have heard the story were made aware of the united effort of our community in this campaign.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Adjournment Of Congress

THE SENATOR from the West remarked plaintively that he had talked to his wife on the long-distance phone and she reported that they had had a fire in the fireplace every night for the past week. Sometimes, she told her suffering husband, it was so cool in the late afternoon they had to light the fire before supper.

Childs

You can begin to see the symptoms developing. The women and children have gone to be cool by a lake or on a mountain. The Senator is lonely. He feels put upon, and, above all, he is hot.

He begins to wonder why Congress should still be in session in the dog days. Nothing but a lot of talk anyway, and he's pretty tired of it.

It is a little like the tremor that runs through a herd of cattle just before the stampede. They want out. One of the sure signs is that in the speculation over adjournment the date is now being moved forward. September 1 is most frequently given now, whereas two or three weeks ago no one hoped to get away until after Labor Day.

UNDER THE La Follette-Monroney Reorganization Act a timetable was worked out. All the deadlines have been ignored, including the date for adjournment which was put at July 31.

In the last-minute rush vital legislation will be scanted or passed over. Appropriation bills jammed through are likely to contain jokers that may seriously impair efficiency or even just normal Government operation.

For the lobbyists and special-interest boys it is a kind of witches' carnival. Under cover of the confusion anything can happen and it usually does. In short, it's a hell of a way to run a railroad!

Geography, politics and climate are all intermingled as the session wears on into August, with the ordinary citizen either about to go on a vacation or just back with a new tan. One reason for the restlessness at this stage is that the Congressman begins to get an uneasy feeling about what is happening back home.

He has been in Washington for seven months. While the scheduled airlines with their big new planes make home a lot closer, still it is an expensive trip and it does take time.

The Congressman has had word that his opponent-to-be in the election next year is already out making speeches and cultivating friends. The mail is mostly full of complaints. What are people really thinking? How is he regarded? The Congressman wants to go home and find out.

Freshmen members are especially plagued with this feeling of doubt and uncertainty. Washington, which happens to be on the Eastern seaboard and a long way from most places, generates its own isolationism.

I LISTENED to Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, one of the freshmen who has made himself heard at this session, talk informally about a remedy. What he suggested was that Congress, during a session of ordinary length, should take at least three or four week-long recesses.

During those recesses members of Congress could go back home with their fare each way paid by congressional appropriation. They would talk with the folks back home and they would return with a clearer idea of what was happening in the country and what was happening to them. Or maybe they would just go fishing and do a little earnest thinking on their own.

This idea is certainly worth considering in any future plan of reorganization. It would remove one of the few valid reasons for that nervous feeling that leads up to the stampede to get away. The conscientious Congressman would not have to be constantly looking back over his shoulder for possible danger signals at home.

The arms aid program has the most far-reaching implications for this country and for the rest of the world. Introduced after the fever to get away has already set in, it can be sidetracked in a last-minute fog of controversy.

Congress will meet in January in the atmosphere of an election year. Then the pressure to get away, to postpone, to delay will be even greater.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Miracle

NEW DELHI, India. Here, amid terrible poverty and atrocious heat, amid lurking violence and muted hates, is the last best hope of Asia. For, almost unnoticed by the West, a miracle has taken place in the last three years. The miracle is simply that in these three years the Indian state has survived, and has continued to function.

Consider the facts. Start with a newly independent state, the mass of whose people live at an increasingly low level of life. Add that these people are divided into races, castes, and religions violently hostile to each other. Add a whole series of semi-independent princely states, prepared violently to resist absorption into the new nation.

Plunge this new state into a civil war, one of the bloodiest in history. Pile into it some five million utterly destitute refugees. Split the new state in two, wholly disrupting its economic life. Confront it with desperate economic problems, above all the problem of finding the food to keep its population, growing at a cancerous rate, alive.

Finally, add a Communist movement determined to take advantage as ruthlessly as possible of all these terrible circumstances. Surely, it would be reasonable to expect the Indian state to disintegrate, plunging into the chaos which has overtaken most of Asia.

YET INDIA has not disintegrated. India has a government whose authority, although constantly challenged, remains supreme. India has at least three political leaders who are men of great stature—and one sometimes wonders if the United States can boast as many. India has a civil service which keeps the infinitely complicated machinery of government ticking over. India has a currency, banking and taxation system which works. India has an army which is loyal, nonpolitical and easily the most powerful in Asia, not excepting the Communist hordes of Mao Tse Tung. In a word, India is functioning. This is the miracle.

Here all sorts of qualifications must be hastily interposed. "A lot depends," said one observer here, "whether you come here from East or West." Certainly the Indian miracle appears particularly miraculous to the traveler who has witnessed the disintegration of nationalist China and the creeping chaos in southeast Asia. And certainly there are no grounds for complacency about the future of this vast, poverty-ridden, undernourished subcontinent.

As on the bodies of so many of the Indian people, there are great running sores on the Indian body politic. One sore is Kashmir. The descent into chaos will be very rapid if an insane war, which neither side can hope to win, flares up between India and Pakistan.

ANOTHER sore is in the great City of Calcutta, and the Province of Bengal, whose entire economy has been wrecked by partition. Riots, led by Communists armed with acid grenades, are an almost daily occurrence in Calcutta, and in Bengal something ominously suggestive of the total chaos of Burma is beginning to appear. Elsewhere in India, in isolated areas, particularly in Hyderabad, the Communists have actually seized power, defying the government. The Communist danger must not be underrated.

Moreover, throughout India, according to wise observers, a virus of disillusion and discontent is spreading, as the heaven on earth which the Indians were led to expect after the British left has failed to materialize. Particularly among students and the jobless college graduates, the Delhi government is now almost as much the enemy as when the British viceroy occupied the vast pink vice general palace.

Yet the fact remains that India has a government which governs and that India is the last best hope of Asia. There are two phrases which the reporter in India hears constantly repeated: "About five years will tell the story," and "it all depends on food."

BARRING a war, the Indian government can reasonably be expected to maintain its authority for about five years. Find the food, within that time, to feed India's people a little above the level of half-starved animals, and India will become a vital makeweight against the Kremlin's Asiatic imperialism. Fail, and India is ultimately lost, and so is Asia.

The Indian government, prodded by Premier Jawaharlal Nehru, is now making a determined effort to solve the food problem, which is at the heart of all India's problems. Nothing in all Asia is more inescapably obvious than that it is in the American interest that this effort should succeed. And with surplus wheat piling up in the American granaries, it is nonsense to say, as some say here, that the Indian problem is too vast for American help, and that nothing can be done here by the United States.

New Supports Proposed for Farm Prices

Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.) stirred up yet another farm price tonic mixture yesterday. It calls for flexible Government supports for some crops, rigid control programs for others, and authority to try out the Brannan subsidy plan on some perishables.

There was no indication that Anderson, who used to be Secretary of Agriculture, had come up with a formula to every body's taste.

Senator Aiken of Vermont, the top-ranking Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee, said "this needs pretty careful screening." Senators Young (R., N. Dak.), Hoye (D. N. C.) and Elmer Thomas (D. Okla.) were reported favoring the plan already adopted by the House, extending the present price support system another year and putting off action on a long-range program.

Anderson heads a seven-man subcommittee which is casting about for an acceptable bill. The other Senators mentioned also are members; Thomas is chairman of the agriculture committee itself.

Flexible Parity Scale

Unless the Senate and House get together on a farm bill, the delayed-action Aiken law passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress will take effect next January 1. It would permit, although not compel, the Secretary of Agriculture to maintain support for major crops on a flexible scale ranging from 60 to 90 per cent of parity. He couldn't go below 60 per cent, but by the flexibility feature, he could expect to exercise some control over the production of crops where surpluses appeared.

(Parity is a level calculated to give the farmer purchasing power such as he had in a previous stipulated period.)

The present farm law provides generally for support of major basic crops at 90 per cent of parity.

Anderson's plan would allow a support range of from 75 to 90 per cent of parity on those crops—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts.

It also would authorize a similar flexible support system for nonbasic but storable farm products such as meats, butter, cheese, wool, oats and rye—provided that effective production controls, approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, were established for them.

Trial Run Allowed

In addition, the Anderson proposal would allow a trial run of the "production payment" or farmer subsidy plan advocated by Agriculture Secretary Brannan. These try-outs would be limited to "nonstorage perishables" including oranges, grapefruit, apples and vegetables.

Their price would be allowed to go to whatever level the market would pay, with the Government making no effort to support the price. Then, if the average return from a crop was less than a previously calculated "fair return" level, the producers would get subsidies from the Government to make up the difference. Such subsidies, of course, would be paid in the end by the taxpayers.

The House rejected even a trial of the Brannan plan when it passed its stop-gap farm bill calling for another year of the relatively high rigid wartime Government price props at 90 per cent of parity.

Potato Farmers Win Support for Parity

By The Associated Press

A spokesman for potato farmers told Congressmen from potato producing States yesterday that the growers are "tired of being whipping boys for the farm price support program."

W. M. Case of Grand Forks, N. Dak., executive secretary of the Red River Valley Growers Association and member of the National Potato Council's legislative committee, told the potato bloc:

"We are tired of being held up to public scorn as the recipients of so many millions of dollars without any credit at all for the growers' own efforts over a period of three years to reduce costs.

"The record clearly shows that potato growers, on the whole, have done almost exactly what the Government has requested of them under programs that have been in effect."

At an informal meeting of Congressmen from potato-growing States the producer spokesman yesterday won unanimous support for continuance of the 60 per cent of parity support price with planting restrictions prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Yesterday's Capitol Hill meeting was called by Senator Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the informal congressional group from potato states. It was called to discuss a threat that mandatory price supports might be withdrawn from potatoes, the only perishable crop in the price support program.

Last Friday Chairman Pace (D., Ga.) of a House agriculture subcommittee called a hearing on his bill to institute production and marketing restrictions on potatoes and to prescribe penalties for violators of such controls.

Grower representatives opposed the measure, saying they had not had time to study it.

They urged that potatoes be left alone for the present—supported at 60 per cent of parity and with acreage goals set by the Secretary of Agriculture. Parity is a figure calculated to give a farmer a fair return in relation to things he buys.

Pace said that the current program benefits non-cooperators more than cooperators and is costing the Government "unjustified" amounts. He said the Agriculture Department estimates the potato support program will cost between 50 and 100 million dollars this year.

This, he said, could endanger the whole price support structure.

Pace said that unless the growers would consent to more rigid controls the committee felt "obligated" to recommend to Congress that it leave to the discretion of the agriculture secretary at what level, if any, he would support the crop.

Case said that "even when we do sharply reduce the cost—cutting it this year to an estimated one-fifth of what it was in 1948—nobody pays any attention or gives us any credit because the admittedly high cost of previous years has been drilled incessantly into the public mind.

"We feel that we are being made the illegitimate child of the farm program, for reasons unknown to us, when our breeding and membership in the great agricultural family is as correct and as proper as any other commodity."

South's Market Value Is Cited In Recent Industrial Growth

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The National Planning Association has found that the recent industrial growth in the South has been due chiefly to low costs, high sales volume, or both.

A survey of 88 postwar plants in the South, ranging in investment from $100,000 to 10 million dollars, has just been published by NPA in book form. It gives the names, locations and products of the plants studied, a list of officers interviewed and a pattern of the business practices used in selecting a location.

The report covers much the same ground as was covered by a survey of a Southern group for the Council of Economic Advisers to the President recently. However, the conclusions reached differ in several respects.

Transportation Cited

For instance, the NPA report declares that "the role of transportation in plant location was reported by company officials to be a critical one." The earlier report for the CEA stated that the belief that high freight rates in the South had hampered its growth industrially was greatly exaggerated.

"The rising importance of the South as a market for industrial and consumer goods attracted 45 per cent of the plants studied," a summary stated. "Materials and energy resources attracted 30 per cent; and labor, primarily in terms of availability of an adequate supply, attracted 25 per cent.

"The market-oriented and material-oriented plants were more important in size of plant and potential income-creating power, than the labor-oriented plants."

The report then criticized the efforts of communities to attract industry through special inducements such as tax exemptions, free plant sites, factory buildings at low rentals, claims of low wage rates, and the like. Such inducements, it said, "had little effect" upon decisions of the companies surveyed.

"This leads to the suggestion," the statement says, "that Southern development agencies, and those in other uneconomically developed areas of the world, reexamine their methods for attracting industry."

Factors in Decisions

The desire of companies to expand by building new branch plants grew out of a national environment of full employment and swollen demand for nearly all products. The decision to build a new plant and the choice of its location arose in one or more of the following situations in each case studied:

1. The old plant had reached its optimum size. A new plant would provide greater efficiency and lower costs.

2. Economies of specialization could be realized. Where the same plant produced several different products, it was often advantageous to build separate plants for the various products.

3. Greater capacity was needed, but newer technologies could not be integrated with the methods and machinery in the old plant. As an example, the new, single-story plant layouts for making tires could not be added to the old multistory plants.

4. Supplies of materials, labor and space were inadequate in existing locations to support increased production.

5. Demand in an area distant from the present plant had increased sufficiently to support a plant nearby.

6. The risk of work stoppage due to labor troubles, material shortages, or weather could be reduced by dividing the plant operations geographically.

7. Rapid increase in production could be achieved by using already-built, idle plants rather than building new ones.

Warns Against Fears

The authors warn against the "too frequent" assumption that industrial expansion in one region may injure another. It concludes that the forces responsible for attracting industry to the South, good markets, available materials—labor, are important national assets.

"They increase the national output of manufactured goods," the report states, "provide in the South increased markets for products made in other regions, promote interregional trade," and, in some respects, lower costs.

The NPA Committee of the South is made up of 50 leaders in the South's agriculture, business, education, finance, Government, industry, labor, press and radio.

The report, titled "Why Industry Moves South," was prepared by a subcommittee headed by Dr. Glenn McLaughlin, chief economist for the National Security Resources Board, and Dr. Stefan Robock of the Anti-Trust Division of the Department of Justice.

June Increase Reported in Factory Sales

Heavier buying by wholesalers and retailers resulted in a 200-million-dollar increase in manufacturers' sales, and a drop of 500 million dollars in their inventories in June, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

It said manufacturing sales totaled $16,500,000,000, while inventories declined to $30,400,000,000. The increase in sales was even more significant than it appeared, because it reversed the normal seasonal decline from May to June.

"After allowance for seasonal influences," the department added, "the June increase was 400 million dollars."

The sales increase was attributed mainly to increased purchases of durable goods. Sales in that field totaled $7,100,000,000, or 300 million dollars more than in May. Allowing for seasonal trends, the increase was 500 million dollars.

"Higher sales were characteristic of many industries in this group," the report said, "but a major element was the increase in the automotive industry accompanying the resumption of full-scale output among the largest producers."

Sales of non-durable goods totaled $9,400,000,000, down $100,000,000 from May. Textiles, leather and chemicals all reported larger-than-normal seasonal increases in sales, but food sales were down more than enough to offset them.

The department said "very little" of the decline in inventories was attributable to seasonal factors.

Of the 500-million-dollar decline in June inventories, it said, 300 million dollars represented sales of durable goods. Durable goods manufacturers held stocks valued at $14,600,000,000 at the end of June.

Housing Unit Attacks Ruling

The Court of Appeals ruling that District health officers cannot make routine inspections of private homes without a search warrant has placed the entire concept of public health "in jeopardy," the Washington Housing Association declared yesterday.

The local group took sharp issue with the 2-to-1 opinion handed down by the appellate court Monday in an open letter to Judge Alexander Holtzoff, who dissented.

"The ruling of the United States Court of Appeals endangers not only the lives of the population of Washington, but its implications reach into the lives of the people of every other American city," the association said.

District officials also have expressed fears that slum clearance enforcement activities have been dealt a serious blow by the ruling.

The letter, signed by Hilda Cloud, executive director of the association, said that to require search warrants in prevention of disease inspections "is to encourage neglect of the elementary principles of sanitation which strive to safeguard the health of the city's population.

"It is absurd to carry the intent of the constitutional prohibition against search and seizure to such extremes. To require warrants for each of the 80,000 cases handled by the Health Department each year is to obstruct the course of justice rather than to assist it," she added.

Education Aid Dies in House

violate the Constitution for the Government to provide aid on auxiliary services directed at the welfare of the child.

The Senate has already passed a $300 million-dollar annual aid to education bill permitting each State to decide whether funds should be used for parochial as well as private schools.

The religious dispute flared into the open, however, after Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.) sponsored a House bill limiting the use of Federal funds to public schools only.

After Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt commented favorably in her column upon the principle in the Barden bill, Cardinal Spellman of New York denounced her as being anti-Catholic. Former Representative Hamilton Fish (R., N. Y.) joined the controversy yesterday, denouncing Mrs. Roosevelt for what he termed her "record" of pro-Communist and anti-Catholic statements and actions.

The committee yesterday first accepted but did not act upon a report by a subcommittee favoring the Barden bill. Then by a vote of 14 to 11, the committee rejected a motion made by Representative Charles R. Howell (D., N. J.) to recommend without amendments the Senate bill.

Next Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.) moved to report out a Republican-sponsored bill which would aid only those States with low incomes and give some help to non-public schools. The motion was defeated, 15 to 10. Kennedy moved to postpone action until next January. The committee voted down this definite action, 13 to 12.

Then Representative Roy M. Wier (D., Minn.) moved to take up the Senate bill open to amendments. Before the committee could vote on this, Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) suggested the Kearns Republican bill be considered for amendments but he was voted down 16 to 8.

Chairman John Lesinski (D., Pa.), who had earlier scored the Southern States for attracting Northern industry tax-free and then expecting Northern States to support their educational systems, looked at the clock at this point and announced the meeting was over. He cited the rule which prohibits committee meetings while the House is in session.

The committee room clock showed only 11:47 a. m. but committee members agreed it was slow and rushed to leave.

As reporters were admitted to the committee room, Rep. Leonard Irving (D., Mo.) shouted, "We still had two minutes to go. I want my protest on this decision recorded."

Health Training Bill Is Approved By Senate Unit

The Senate Labor Committee yesterday unanimously approved a bill authorizing about 95 million dollars in Federal grants the next two years for training health personnel.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) announced the action. He called the measure "substantially an Administration bill" in line with a section of the general health program President Truman recently submitted to Congress.

The bill does not deal with another more controversial section of the Truman program, which calls for national health insurance.

Pepper said that under the bill approved yesterday, Federal grants to training schools and to States would amount to about $44,700,000 the first year and about 51 million dollars the second year.

room . . . and visitors, including probably the woman's husband, would witness the scene.

And maybe that camera which now rested on the back seat ledge would be along and the flash of a bulb would lighten the night.

This could happen tonight on that second floor, though The Eye did not anticipate it, this being an early stage in the case.

The reactions of spouses surprised at the moment at which The Eye has surprised hundreds is worthy of a thesis in psychology.

Squeal From the Man

Once, after a little trouble with the door, The Eye crashed to find only the woman. Snooping the apartment, he finally discovered the man: Curled up on a closet shelf, where he was endeavoring to hide beneath his single garment, a bathrobe. As The Eye peeked gently beneath it, a squeal came:

"You didn't catch me doing anything! You didn't catch me doing anything! You didn't catch me doing anything!"

Sometimes the huffy phrase comes from the lover: "What does this mean?"

The Eye has a reply for this one: "This means you're going to be a corespondent in one good divorce case."

One man was overjoyed.

"How long have you been working on this case?" he asked The Eye.

"Only four days."

"I'll be damned," the man said, shaking his head. "I wish you'd called me the first day. We could have set it up. I've been trying for 10 years to get rid of that woman I'm married to.'

A Light Comes On

The Eye broke off in his stories for a matter at hand. He peered intently through the night.

There, dead ahead in the living-room, the wife and the man not her husband were arising from the couch. They left the room and another light in the apartment came on.

But they had only gone into the kitchen. They stayed there a while, apparently stirring themselves up a couple of long cool drinks for the hot summer evening. Then they returned to the living-room. They could be seen on the couch, sipping from glasses.

The Eye relaxed again in the car. He related a couple of other cases which rather graphically illustrated Woman at two of her great and varying stages: woman in defiance, and woman abjectly contrite.

They also illustrated in some detail the workings of the weird profession of the private detective.

The Dogged Search

The Eye had been trailing the wife of his wealthy Washington client, who suspected her of toying around with a handsome gentleman from Wilmington. But the chase had turned up no concrete evidence.

Then one day he got a call from the client: His wife said she wanted to go to New York to see a friend off on a boat.

'Let her go," grimly and promptly said The Eye, who knows a beautiful story when he sees one.

He trailed her—and the woman companion she had with her—to Union Station. He was behind her when she made a call at that place where you do it through a telephone girl sitting at a counter. He was not close enough to see the slip stating the place of the call but he did observe the amount of money the woman paid for it: It was the toll for a call to Wilmington.

No Surprise at All

The Eyes tiger wit of anticipation sharpened perceptibly as he boarded the train behind her and her woman companion. It was no surprise at all when the party was joined at Wilmington by an expensively dressed man.

The Eye followed the pair to a swank New York hotel. A thing also not surprising to him happened here. The man registered as Mr. So-and-So and his wife, and the wife of The Eye's client registered correctly in a separate room.

"An old trick," observed The Eye. "They were using the other woman as a stooge."

So: "I dogged them nightclubbing all over New York and right back to the hotel. The other woman went to the single room and the man and my client's wife went to the double room."

After a discreet period of waiting in the hall outside, The Eye stepped to the maid's phone, called the room, addressed the man by his first name and identified himself as the hotel manager—who, he had discovered earlier, was an old friend of the gentleman from Wilmington.

"I just wanted to see you about something, Jack," he crooned. "I'll come on up. Don't bother to get dressed."

This one was a pushover, for the man opened the door. The Eye dived inside and there saw what he wanted to see.

After a small interlude The Eye put in a call to Washington. Then he turned to the woman.

"Your husband's on the phone."

"No Beating Around the Bush"

The wife took the phone and broke into tears. "I don't know why I did it," she sobbed to her husband. "I don't know why I did it. You've got me, there's no beating around the bush, but . . . I don't know why I did it . . ."

The Eye took the phone back.

"Bring her home," the husband said quietly.

The detective did—home to her husband and three children.

Then there was that other conversation, between a business man here and his wife, whom The Eye had caught in an apartment with another man.

The wife's voice over the phone from the apartment was calm—and cold: "You didn't have to go to all this trouble."

This telephone confrontation seems like a remarkable ritual. Its reason lies not in revenge, or masochism, but in The Eye's experience that later the erring spouse is likely to tell her mate that that detective is a liar. Having his client along in person, or on the other end of a telephone line shortly after the moment of surprise, obviates this.

Hoped He Wouldn't Catch Her

Once a husband, on getting the news, told The Eye: "I was hoping you wouldn't catch her."

"You mean you're paying me $500 and you're going to pay me more, and you were hoping I wouldn't catch her?" ejaculated the detective.

"I was hoping she wasn't doing anything," the husband said sadly. "I was in love with her."

Prices, like the divorce lawyer's, are based on what the traffic will bear. A penniless—comparatively—Government girl will put up a $100 retainer fee and maybe will cough up two or three hundred dollars more when the evidence is in. A business executive who has it may pay $5000.

The present case, of the wife and the man having their long cool drinks in the living room beyond us, was costing the husband a $250 retainer fee, with $500 more to come.

Frequently Just Imagination

"It would cost him $1200 but he doesn't have any money," The Eye observed generously.

"It is interesting," he added as an afterthought, "how women can find enough money to hire me to trail their husbands when they don't have enough to buy a loaf of bread for the house. And frequently it's nothing but their imagination about their husband." It is a thick mess of pottage that The Eye's workings sometimes stir up.

Once he caught the beautiful wife of a Government lawyer here with a circus stunt man. This did not bother her much, for she wanted to marry the daredevil anyhow.

What did alarm her was that The Eye also surprised her with still another man. She was terrified lest the second man, in addition to the circus gentleman, be named as a corespondent.

The client's lawyer generously agreed to forego this and the woman was able to marry the unsuspecting daredevil after being divorced by the Government lawyer.

Beyond us, the wife and the man not her husband continued their conversation in the living room, tripping out to the kitchen occasionally to refill their drinks.

It was with great satisfaction that The Eye, glancing at his illuminated dial watch, watched the hours roll by. Both the time they were in the apartment together and the lateness of the hour impressed him, for he does not believe in quiet games of checkers—at a late hour—between a wife and a man not her husband alone in an apartment.

Eleven thirty . . . twelve thirty . . . If the pair should show themselves advancing far beyond the long, cool drink stage, The Eye might be off like a shot to a phone and some help and there might be a crashing of doors . . .

All Too Proper

But it was 1:30 now and in the living room all was much too proper for such methods.

Then the illuminated dial on the Eye's wristwatch showed 2:30. The man and woman arose from the couch. Tiger-like, the Eye awaited their next course, to which door they would turn. But the man was turning towards the outside door . . .

It was a few moments then and his silhouetted figure emerged from the apartment house and into a maroon Chevrolet.

Quickly the Eye started his car, slid down the hill and into a driveway, so that the man should not see him if he came this way . . .

But he was going in the opposite direction . . .

In a flash the Eye had rammed out of the driveway and was on his trail.

Slowly Drives Away

And there he stayed for several miles across Washington. We watched the man go into his own apartment house, then slowly drove away.

We swung up along Wisconsin Avenue. The Eye was in a contented, though again not a gloating, mood.

"A very substantial evening's work," he observed. "From 9:23 until 2:30 entertaining the gentleman in her apartment. A few more nights . . . All I have to do is wait. . ."

The Washington night swallowed up the dark forms of apartment houses. Here and there in a room one could see an occasional light burning. Like a bus driver on a holiday, or perhaps just to keep in practice, The Eye glanced up at them from time to time as we drove along.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

IF YOU'VE been complaining about "the same old food," why not try some of the Italian restaurants? Hereabouts, there are several boasting the old country's culinery treatment.

Ciro's, at 1707 De Sales, (across from the Mayflower), serves a full course Italian meal that will satisfy the most hearty eater.

Antipasto begins the marathon, with a multitude of tidbits. Soup—usually minestrone—follows. The last of that appetite you'd been harboring will go with the spaghetti and meat sauce. But then comes the meat dish! From about 15 choices, many of them American, your selection is served up with vegetables and salad. An Italian Rum Cake and Italian Demi-Tasse finishes the meal, followed by a check for only $1.75.

A little ways up Connecticut ave., just above Dupont Circle, Tony and Frank Caligure's is an outpost for South Americans and Europeans who prefer highly spiced, heavy dishes to our broiled chops and boiled vegetables. Dinners go up from $1.75, (mostly up), include many special Italian concoctions. Tony and Frank, genial and hardworking, know the restaurant business from bottom to top; their friendships and established reputations made Caligure's an assured success when they opened 14 months ago.

Two blocks further up Connecticut, at California, the Highlands Apartments has an unheralded dining room which has as good pizza and Italian dishes as you can find. Crisp, flaky pastry, with just enough tomatoes and anchovies, make up a pizza that escapes the usual pitfalls into which even the best Neapolitan cooks fall.

A few blocks over, at 1143 New Hampshire, Aldo's is a meeting place for students and other young people. The basement dining room has lots of atmosphere, and the summer garden, a Bohemian air. They also have the full Italian dinner.

THIS is "Folk Music Week" and it was started off Monday morning by Congressman Hamilton Jones, (N. C.), who presented the 2½ millionth pressing of Arthur Smith's Guitar Boogie" to the Library of Congress.

Arthur Smith, fiddler and electric guitarist head of the Crackerjacks appearing at the Blue Mirror during August, is a North Carolinian himself. The Smith boys, (they make up three fourths of the quartet), hail from a town called Kershaw. Between them they play the banjo, accordion, bass fiddle and sing.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

HAVE YOU NOTICED there's a fair sort of contest for the American League batting title wrapped up in that heated pennant race? Only eight points were separating the top four guys as of yesterday, and with the exception of Ted Williams, the leaders are a lot of strangers, never before linked to batting honors.

Bob Dillinger of the Browns is leading the parade with a fancy .349 figure. Hitherto he was never viewed as a potential batting champion, but there he is outwhacking everybody else in August. He has a 6-point lead over Dom DiMaggio, who was never rated as better than a fair hitter. Williams has pushed his average up to a neat .341, but that has fetched him no beter than a third-place tie with George Kell of the Tigers.

POVICH

The suspicion is that if Williams is that close at this stage of the season, then he will wind up on top. Certainly he is the most solid performer in the field, with a background of four previous batting titles to his credit. He is scarcely a flash in the pan. When Williams doesn't lead the league in hitting, it's an upset. There have been no upsets since 1946, when Mickey Vernon snuck in to top the league with all of those safe hits to left field.

AMONG THE OTHERS, the most surprising figure in one sense is Dillinger. That young man who plays third base for the Browns doesn't even look as if he belongs on a big league ball team—until the game starts. He's a skinny, turkey-necked lad and nearsighted to boot. With those glasses he wears, Dillinger looks like a refugee from a bookkeeper's stool. Certainly he is unimpressive as a chap who might grab up a bat and lead the league in hitting.

But there he is, a good hitter. Been with the Browns three seasons and has a lifetime average of .304. His .349 average of this season is not so far-fetched. Dillinger was a .321 hitter last year. The league's pitchers have a proper respect for him. They know he can hit to all fields and is the problem child of both the outfielders and infielders, with his ability to leg out hits as well as bash them out. He's the fastest guy in the league.

The one-two guys wear glasses, in fact. Dom DiMaggio is much the same type of hitter as Dillinger with his speed that gets him many an infield hit, and, like Dillinger, he is a little fellow who does not meet the popular conception of a top hitter. Understandable enough, they call Dom "The Little Professor" up Boston way. He looks of professional mien as a glasses-wearing citizen of not too much bulk.

RIGHT NOW, the younger DiMag has a 28-game consecutive hitting streak going for him and is hitting better than at any time in his life. In his five previous years with the Red Sox, Dominic hit .300 or better only twice and his lifetime figure is only .292, but there's no gainsaying his swatting this season. It's an upset, though, when any season finds him contesting Williams for the batting honors.

More seemingly among the top hitters is the Tigers' Georgie Kell. He's no bigger than DiMaggio and Dillinger, but he has been a better hitter ever since he broke into the majors. Connie Mack grabbed him up from Lancaster in 1942, after Kell led not only the Inter-State League but the whole United States in hitting with a .396 average. He has hit better than .300 in his last three years with the Tigers.

Fifth in the list is another surprise figure, Roy Sievers, the St. Louis Browns' rookie. He's a real come-lately with his .319 average. Only a couple of years ago he was puttering about the St. Louis sandlots. Sievers is too far back to be reckoned among the batting title possibilities this year, but he must be tabbed for future reference.

WHOEVER WINS THE TITLE might find it a bit tained, however. Save for Joe DiMaggio's sore heel that kept him out of two months of play, he might have been on top at this point. And until he broke his collarbone and was out for nearly 10 weeks, Rookie Gus Zernial of the White Sox was leading the league with .355 and making a wunner'ful bid to finish on top in his freshman year.

It's a bit illogical to find as good a hitter as Ted Williams in third place, but he could move in front any week, and probably will. He's in a contest with guys who are having the best batting years of their lives and are probably hitting over their heads. Williams, who once hit .406, wouldn't need one of his good years to finish on top. He has a lifetime average of .354.

There's a special incentive for Williams to win his third straight batting title, anyway. With the Red Sox, Vern Stephens is crowding him for both home run and runs-batted-in honors. Williams is unhappy unless he is the Red Sox's top hitter in everything. Under pressure from Stephens, Williams will be taking his best cuts from here in.

—Maybe It's the Heat—

Whelchel Mum After First Real Closeup Of Redskins; Players Are Silent Also

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE, Calif., Aug. 2—Curiosity was all over the place as the Washington Redskins went through their first dress rehearsal today.

One of the most curious was Head Coach Billick Whelchel, fresh out of the Navy as a rear admiral. The players in turn were curious as to what Whelchel would be like as head man.

It was Whelchel's first real close-up of the big guys who will play ball for him this fall. After observing the squad, Whelchel kept his thoughts to himself.

About his only comment was that it was "too d——— hot" for the start of football training. The temperature was 83, and Whelchel was afraid the players might sweat off weight too fast.

Some of the players cut their workouts short to avoid soaking up too much sun. These included Washington's own Brian Bell, freshman backfield man from Washington and Lee, and Dan Sandifer, Eddie Saenz and Hal Crisler.

Nobody's curiosity was satisfied. Certainly Whelchel gave the players no hint as to how he will proceed and it's far too early for Whelchel to draw a line on the players.

On the first day of morning and afternoon practice, pointing most directly at their August 26 exhibition date with the Los Angeles Rams, the 'Skins boasted a squad that was big in avoirdupois, if not in number . . . 40 huskies cavorted on the lawn where the Oxies, as Occidental College teams are known, play their home games . . . although at least five other hopeful gridmen had asked for jobs, the only late starter was Tom Clary, a center from Canadian football.

As frisky as anybody was Sammy Baugh, the 35-year-old passing master who seemed to have forgotten his complaints of a few days ago . . . he was throwing with all his old sharpness in spite of the fact he hasn't had a football in his hands since last December . . . in 12 previous seasons with the Redskins, however, he perhaps learned enough about passing to carry him through the off season . . . his top understudy, Harry Gilmer, of Alabama, showed no ill effects of the leg operation which benched him last season . . . Tommy Mont and Bob Hainlen also took turns quarterbacking backfield formations, Mont looking especially accurate passing the ball.

If they can make the squad, at least two rookies and oldtimers Steve Bagarus and Howie Livingston will give it a lot of speed . . . even at 30 years of age, Bagarus was moving like a comet, and, Livingston's renovated knee seemed as good as new . . . Southern Cal's Jack Kirby looked like a possible replacement for the retired Dick Todd, and Wake Forest's Harry Dowda might be in a class by himself . . . he's a "loose" 195-pounder, just 24 years old, who can go like lightning and stop on a single blade of grass.

Tigers Clout Four Homers In 10-2Romp

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Hal Newhouser, aided by home run blasts by Vic Wertz, Aaron Robinson, Dick Wakefield and Johnny Lipon, went the route for the first time in more than a month, defeating the New York Yankees tonight, 10-2.

A crowd of 57,238 saw the Yankees' lead over Cleveland shrink to 3½ games as Allie Reynolds' 10-game winning streak ended.

Reynolds was blasted out in a five-run fifth inning to be charged with his second loss against 11 victories.

Newhouser accounted for his first success since June 29 when he blanked the Indians.

Robinson put the Tigers in front with his tenth homer with one on in the fourth, and then the Bengals blew the game wide open in the fifth with a five-run barrage which included Wertz's 11th circuit wallop with one on.

Wakefield hit his fourth homer off Fred Sanford while Lipon connected for his second off Ralph Buxton, who finished up.

The Tigers' streak of 27 shutout innings came to an end as the Yankees scored in the first when Joe DiMaggio drove Tommy Henrich home with a single.

Jerry Coleman's fly sent Johnny Lindell across with the final Yankee run off Newhouser in the second.

The Tigers' star lefthander blanked the Yankees the rest of the way though he was found for six hits in the last eight frames.

Bosox Win On Freak Play

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—Dom DiMaggio singled as the first batter in the ninth and then raced home from third base with the winning run on a fielder's choice as the Boston Red Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns tonight, 4-3. DiMaggio's run was scored with the bases loaded and none out when Vern Stephens ducked a Ned Garver pitch, the ball struck his bat and rolled down the first base line.

Bill Vogt Upset By Sid Schwartz

South Orange, N. J., Aug. 2 (AP). With the exception of eighth-seeded Billy Vogt of Drexel Hill, Pa., all of the rated American stars continued to hold their own after the second day of play in the twenty-third annual Eastern grass court championships at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

Vogt was upset by unheralded Sid Schwartz of New York, 6—2, 4—6, 10—8, in a second-round match.

Top-seeded Billy Talbert of New York defeated Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, 6—4, 6—1.

Second-seeded Earl Cochell of San Francisco, who arrived today from Europe, defeated Carlton Rood of Brooklyn, 6—1, 6—0, in a first-round match.

St. Louis Tops Braves, 7 to 2; Retains Lead

St. Louis, Aug. 2 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals backed up Red Munger's five-hit pitching with five doubles and a triple to hand the Boston Braves a 7-to-2 defeat tonight. Stan Musial had one of the doubles and the triple.

A five-run rally in the fifth enabled the Cards to retain their half-game league lead over Brooklyn.

It was Munger's tenth victory against four defeats this season. Except for the first inning and a Boston threat in the eighth he had the Braves under control.

Early Wynn Wins Just as He Pleases

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Early Wynn, 19-game loser for the Nats last year, became a nine-game winer for the Cleveland Indians last night.

Backed by a 15-hit attack, Wynn flipped the Indians to an easy 8-1 victory over his old teammates and also pitched them a notch closer to the pace-setting New York Yankees.

As Wynn and the Indians were assaulting the Nats, the Detroit Tigers crocked the Yankees and reduced their lead over second-place Cleevland to 3½ games.

In no ways resembling the Wynn who was the losingest pitcher in the American League last year, the sturdy righthander was in complete control of the situation, as 14,673 patrons observed.

He yielded nine hits, but whenever the Nats got notions of unseating him from the early lead the Indians gave him, Wynn whizzed his fast ball in and stopped every Nat scoring attempt except one.

Robbie Spoils It

Ironically, it was Eddie Robinson, who came to the Nats in the Wynn trade, who helped spoil Wynn's shutout. The big first baseman doubled in the second and scored on Sam Dente's single, and that was all the scoring the Nats were to do.

The nearest they came after that was in the eighth inning, when Jake Early was thrown out at the plate trying to score from first base on Sherry Robertson's double.

Every man in the Cleveland lineup except Wynn got at least one hit. Joe Gordon, Dale Mitchell and Bob Kennedy each got three. Gordon rapped in one run and scored two with a triple and two singles. Mitchell paddled in two runs with his three singles while Kennedy also knocked in a run with one of his three singles.

Harris, still victoryless since joining the Nats June 13, was the chief victim of the bombardment. He retired with his eighth defeat after pitching five-run, 10-hit ball in five innings.

Singles by Gordon, Kennedy and Johnny Berardino brought in the first of three Cleveland runs in the second inning. Wynn knocked in the sceond on an infield out and Mitchell's single off Harris' glove produced the third score.

Stewart Adds One

The Nats got only one of these back in their half of the inning when Dente followed Robinson's double high against the rightfield wall with his run-producing single.

The Nats made a few gestures after that but Wynn was quite capable of meeting each and every one.

Larry Doby's single, Gordon's triple to deep left and the second of Kennedy's three hits made it 5-1 Cleveland in the 5th.

The Tribe greeted Gettel in the 6th with another run and finished up their performance with two tallies in the ninth, one off Gettel and the other off Ed Stewart. With runners on first and third, Lou Boudreau singled to drive in the 7th Cleveland run and when Stewart's relay to home was wild Vernon came in with the final tally.

Giants Blank Chicago, 3 to 0

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—Sheldon Jones, who hadn't completed a game since May 19, gave up only three singles today as the New York Giants dumped the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 0. Only 30 men faced Jones, who was credited with his third triumph in a week.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Giants and the seventh consecutive defeat for the Cubs.

Hal Jeffcoat rapped a single in the second inning and Bob Scheffing got the Cubs' next hit in the fifth. Hank Edwards connected for a pinch single in the ninth and Emil Verban, who ran for him, was the only Cub to reach second.

Veteran Dutch Leonard went all the way for the Cubs and yielded nine hits.

Pro Court Loops Meet

Optimistic reports of a merger between the Basketball Association of American and the National Basketball League were circulating freely in New York where representatives of the two leagues meet today.

Most widely voiced report is that the leagues will combine franchises to operate an 18-city loop with two divisions.

Washington Cap officials yesterday said they knew nothing about the merger rumors. M. J. Uline, suffering from a cold, isn't expected to make the trip to New York. General Manager Bob Foster and Paul Rothgeb will be looking out for the Caps.

Actual representatives for the BAA include Ned Irish, Madison Square Garden; Eddie Gottlieb, Philadelphia Warrior, and Walt Brown, Boston Celtics.

In Baltimore, Jake Embry, president of the Bullets, said, "I think there is a fair chance of the merger."

The name of Maurice Podoloff, BAA president, has been conspicuously absent in the league discussions.

Shirley May Denies Plans to Swim Sans Suit

Dover, England, Aug. 2 (U.P.). Shirley May France denied today with outraged dignity "ridiculous" reports she planned to doff her bathing suit when she tries to swim the English Channel this month.

The buxom Somerset, Mass., high school girl said she hoped her denial of plans for swimming in the nude would "kill this ridiculous story at once and for all."

Ted Temme, trainer of channel swimming champions denied he had criticized Shirley or her reported plans.

"I merely remarked that it was neither healthy nor proper for anyone to swim in the channel in the nude," he said. "A woolen suit is necessary to conserve body warmth.

"I was asked what I thought of anyone swimming in the channel in the nude and that was my reply. I know nothing of Miss France's plans; I am not connected with or advising her party, so naturally I did not know what she planned to wear or not wear.

"If she's wearing a suit my remarks do not apply to her. They were meant in general for any chanel swimmer now or in the future."

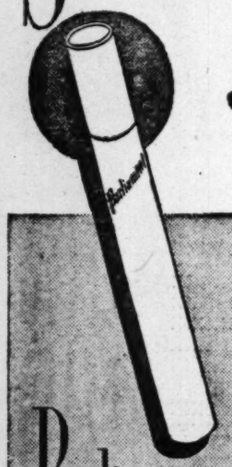
Parliament CIGARETTES

A tip to Smart Smokers



Parliament's built-in filter mouthpiece insures Cleaner Smoking

Why fuss around trying to keep a cigarette holder clean? The fresh, clean filter mouthpiece built into each Parliament cigarette insures cleaner smoking and the utmost enjoyment of Parliament's superb tobaccos.

THE CIGARETTE WITH THE BUILT-IN FILTER MOUTHPIECE

Jim Pilots Belle Moose In Feature

Special To Post

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 2.—Jimmy Baird, third leading winning rider in America last year, thrilled the crowd of 7000 which turned out to help the Hagerstown Fair Association usher in its annual 10-day race meeting by winning three races.

Included was the Bester Memorial with Belle Moose, property of E. L. Miller of Martinsburg, W. Va.

Baird started the scoring in the 6½-furlong event when he drove W. G. Myers Silk and Satin home ahead of R. W. Moore's Tap Lightly to pay $7. R. A. Chapman's Gem D'Esprit was third.

After Mrs. E. S. Hineman's Annedda had won the mile and one sixteenth second to pay $5, Baird won the third with Mrs. A. V. Murphy's Little Orchid, another $7 winner.

Unplaced in the fourth, Baird sat out the fifth, then won the opening day feature with favored Belle Moose, leading every step of the journey to pay $3.80. It was the mare's fourteenth start of the year and her sixth victory.

Those fans holding the 1-7 daily double combination of Silk and Satin and Annedda drew down $18.40.

Heurich Again Edges Cameo, 6-5, to Win Post Loop Playoff

Jim Francis Drives Home Final Run

By Jules Loh

Jim Francis' single with one out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth drove in the winning run for Heurich over Cameo, 6-5, yesterday on the West Ellipse, wresting The Washington Post Industrial League crown from the defending champs.

Behind 5-4 going into the last of the ninth, Heurich Leftfielder Red Geigerich, led off with a sharp single to left. Willie Kauffman attempted a sacrifice bunt but Cameo third sacker, Rufe Crawford, threw wild to first.

Geigerich continued to third on the error and scored the tying run when Cameo Catcher Eddie Lloyd backed up the play at third and left the plate unattended.

Kauffman advanced to third on a futile play made at home and twisted a muscle as he slid. Charley Aquilino was sent in to run for him, and Relief Hurler Whitey Chancellor was called in by Cameo.

With the winning run on third Pepco Barry lined out to third, Jim Castiglia was walked intentionally, and Pinch-hitter Archie Via loaded the bases with an infield single. Then Francis drilled his single to right for the game-winning blow.

Bob Feller holds the major league record for most strikeouts in a game—he whiffed 18.

At Kalamazoo

Bogley Wins Again, 6-0, 6-4; Bradford Also Climbs, 6-0, 6-0

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 2.—National Junior Champion Gilbert Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md., continued defense of his title today in the National Junior tennis championships by defeating Bob Roediger of Tucson, Ariz., to advanced into the fourth round of play. Gil won easily in straight sets 6—0, 6—4.

Tom Bradford, of Washington, D. C., playing in the boys division went into the third round with a victory over Irving Pielat of Hinsdale, Ill., 6—0, 6—0.

Bogley played his best tennis of the tournament in the first set. The long ball hitter from the Southwest matched him stroke for stroke at the baseline, but Gil's forcing at the net kept Bob on the defensive.

The champion let down a trifle in the second set and Roediger was able to garner four games. The junior singles matches were played late in the day, the delay being caused by wet courts.

Ted Rogers, 16-year-old Landon high school star, was eliminated in the third round by Jimmy Farrell, a tall, thin Kalamazoo junior, seeded twelfth in the tournament, 6—3, 6—4.

Tomorrow morning Bogley will meet Teddy Jax, the Hamtramack (Detroit) southpaw, with a position in the quarterfinals at stake. Today Jax defeated the eleventh seeded junior, Reynolds McCabe of La Mesa, Calif., 7—5, 9—7.

In the boys' division, Tom Bradford of Washington will meet Don Thompson of Jackson Heights, N. Y., second seeded. Bradford whitewashed Irving Pielet of Hinsdale, Ill., 6—0, 6—0.

Attention Griff

Pitcher J. Travers once allowed 24 runs in one game to hold the major league record in that dubious department.

Boys Club Receives $5000 From Celebrities Golf Fund

Philip L. Graham, president and publisher of The Washington Post, yesterday presented a $5000 check to the Boys Club of Washington.

The gift was part of the proceeds of the National Celebrities Golf Tournament, sponsored annually by The Washington Post in connection with the Attorney General's campaign to combat juvenile deliquency.

E. K. Morris, club president, received the check which will be used to equip and program the athletic fields for the club's new Georgetown branch.

Presentation was made on the site, a five-acre plot just east of Wisconsin ave., and north of S st. nw., where taut-muscled, sunbaked club members have been eagerly pitching into the preliminary work of clearing and sodding the land.

The athletic field project will include two tennis courts, an outdoor basketball court, and a football-baseball field. It will also be adapted for track and field events, will be fringed with horseshoe pitching and marble-shooting courts, and used for summertime barbecues and dances.

Some 3000 youths a week are expected to enjoy these facilities when completed about October, Charles Fyfe, executive director, said.

The new Georgetown branch is a five-year, $800,000 project. It will replace the present, inadequate Georgetown branch in the old Peck Chapel, 28th and M sts. nw.

Already completed is the first unit, a red brick building, which will house the building's boiler room, lockers and tiled showers and serve as the field house.

The next unit of the structure when built will include two bowling alleys and a music department. The third addition will include game rooms, offices, a roof-top rifle range, club rooms—and a convertible indoor-outdoor swimming pool, 75 by 30 feet.

"All of that adds up to the finest Boys Club in the East," Morris predicted. He said the club hopes to have plans completed and construction underway on the second unit project by May 14, when the national convention of the Boys Club of America convenes here at the Shoreham Hotel for a four-day confab.

The Boys Club of Washington, which has administration offices at the Eastern Branch, 17th st. and Massachusetts ave. se., has some 4000 members, aged 8 to 21.

Also present at yesterday's presentation were: Maurice Palmer, chairman of the club's finance committee; Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post; and Bus Ham, sports editor of The Washington Post.

Vinson Instructed On Parachute But Gives Flier Advice

STORY: Chief Justice Fred Vinson was fitted with a parachute by a sergeant on that disabled Army plane which made an emergency landing last week in North Carolina. The excited sergeant was giving the Supreme Court chief rapid-fire instructions on the use of a parachute.

He told him what to do in the air after his jump. Then he began to instruct him on how to land when he reached the ground. Vinson gave the sergeant a fatherly pat on the back and said:

"Listen son, you just get me to the ground and I'll handle it from there on."

CUT RESTORED: After a ding-dong debate, the Senate yesterday reversed itself and voted to restore the $2,250,000 it had cut from the 1950 budget of the Civil Service Commission. Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) made the motion to reconsider the slash. His motion carried by a 46-to-44 vote If it had failed, the commission would have had to lay off another 400 employes.

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), led the attack on Civil Service. He said: "The day for a housecleaning in Civil Service has come. What the commission needs to do is to get rid of its own spoils system of red tape. The red tape in the commission," he charged, "is defeating the merit system principle."

VA: The Senate also approved a budget for the Veterans Administration which is nearly 25 millions more than the House figure for salaries. Even so, VA's department of medicine and surgery must lay off some of its employes . . . MARITIME: The Senate rejected a motion to cut by 5 per cent the administrative expenses of the Maritime Committee . . . PERSONNEL: It okayed the committee rider to direct the Budget Bureau to set up standards for Government personnel offices.

COMPENSATION BILL: The Senate Labor Committee yesterday reported out the House-approved Lesinski bill to give more realistic benefits to Federal workers who are injured or killed on the job. The Senate bill would limit benefits to $525 a month; it includes members of Congress, and it would require Federal agencies to keep records on employes who are killed or injured.

TREASURY: Wilbur H. Ziehl is the new chief of Customs' budget and management division. He succeeds David B. Strubinger who was promoted to assistant commissioner.

PAY BILL: The Long subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday gave its approval to the bills: (1) to revise the classification act and to raise the salaries of classified workers an average of $125-a-year, and (2) to boost the salaries of Cabinet members and 200 other executives.

A third bill to raise the salaries of legislative and judicial employes is being drafted. Senator Long (D., La.), said it would not propose pay raises for members of Congress. His subcommittee yesterday voted down an amendment to raise congressional salaries to $20,000 as of January, 1951.

The legislative bill would allow administrative assistants and committee clerks to be paid up to $12,000, and the top Senate secretaries could be paid a maximum of $9000. The clerical allowance would be hiked for all congressional offices.

The proposed congressional pay raise was shelved by the subcommittee, it's reported, after House Civil Service leaders warned they wouldn't accept it.

HOUSE PROGRESS: Meantime, the House Civil Service Committee heard Ismar Baruch who said the Civil Service Commission would not object to any "reasonable solution" to boost pay raises in the lower grades.

The Civil Service official was commenting on a proposal by James G. Yaden, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, to lift the starting salary from $2100 to $2186 and to increase the pay rates in the first seven grades. Chairman Murray was impressed with Yaden's suggestions.

Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes, testified the Murray reclassification bill was a step in the right direction. But she urged that salary overlaps be eliminated; that lower grades be merged and new grades added at the top; that the clerical-mechanical service be retained in the classification act, and that the Government provide uniforms for employes who are required to wear them.

D. C. Takes Sales Tax In Stride on Second Day

Restaurant Group To Contest Rule That a 10c Beer Is Free of Tax

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District sales tax went into its second day yesterday with everyone except a few diehards taking it in stride.

At the sales tax office in the District Building, five to six information clerks had hardly any business and Allan F. Brooke, sales tax administrator, found his telephone was almost silent.

The first suggestion of real opposition to the tax came from the Washington Restaurant Beverage Association, which announced it would contest a ruling by the administrator that individual purchases of 10-cent glasses of beer were tax-free.

The association's executive secretary, Seymour Wiener, said he plans to send out a bulletin to members recommending that a tax be collected on the sale of a second 10-cent glass of beer, whether payment was made separately for the first or not.

Lose 45c on Half Barrel

Wiener said such tax collection was essential if taverns were to remain in business. He said operators stand to lose 45 cents a half-barrel since they cannot collect tax on 10-cent sales, but must pay a tax on gross receipts, including such sales. The association official said the group was prepared to take the matter to the courts if necessary.

Brooke said his ruling remains unchanged and pointed out that similar questions raised in other States have failed in the courts. Maryland faced similar opposition when the sales tax was established there, but the ruling stayed in force.

Restaurant operators were still trying yesterday to clarify tax billing procedure for waitresses. Several exempted the first $1.25 of an expensive meal from tax, contrary to the regulations. The tax is applicable on the entire amount if it runs over the $1.25 exemption.

The Washington Restaurant Association printed 20,000 small cards listing proper deductions on meals and beverage sales. These will be distributed free to members of the restaurant industry, Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary, announced.

Representatives Untaxed

At the Capitol, Representatives enjoyed taxfree meals on their side of the building, while Senators were billed the tax. The reason was that the Representatives run their own eating place, while the Senate dining room is operated by a concession. No tax is levied on sales by governmental units. A formal ruling on this is expected later this week.

In the District Building, city employes found the price boosted on some small items because the operator of the refreshment stand felt the tax on his gross receipts, other than that from foods, would run below tax collections. The foods are exempt and not computed in the receipts.

Another 200 applications for certificates of registration were received yesterday boosting the total to about 11,000. The District Board of Trade rechecked estimates that 20,000 to 25,000 persons would be required to file for the certificates, and disclosed that 17,000 was a more accurate figure.

William H. Press, executive secretary, said the District Unemployment Compensation Board had 17,878 accounts and that after deducting the number of dentists and doctors, who will not be collecting the tax, and adding those wholesalers who sometimes sell at retail, the total is expected to be about 17,000.

On Thursday, the District will send inspectors on a block-by-block check of establishments. Chief Auditor William P. Bogardus, who will supervise the survey, said the project will start downtown with three to four men and expand as additional personnel becomes available.

Sales Tax Administrator Brooke declared that those who have not yet applied for certificates will be haled into court unless good reason is supplied for failure to apply.

Maryland Sales Tax Administrator Walter E. Kennedy is receiving inquiries from Maryland patrons of District firms asking whether they will be exempted from the Maryland levy if they pay the District tax. He said he will meet with Brooke next week before giving an opinion.

Jury Indicts Grillo on Tax Charge

Former Spotlight Club Owner Faces Criminal Count In Second Charge

Vincent Grillo, proprietor of the defunct, after-hours Spotlight Club here and former concessionaire at the old Washington Aviation and Country Club, was indicted on tax charges yesterday by a Federal Grand jury at Baltimore.

In addition to the indictment, a criminal information was filed against him there containing additional tax law violation allegations.

The indictment and the information charge that in three quarters of the calendar year 1946, he collected from employes but failed to make returns on or pay to the Federal Government a total of $1242.30 in withholding taxes and $272.94 in Social Security taxes.

A bench warrant for Grillo was to be issued in Baltimore today.

Grillo "Mystified"

Reached last night at his home at 2564 University pl. nw., Grillo said he was mystified by the action.

"I don't know what it's all about," he said. "To the best of my knowledge, we made returns of everything we collected. It's true that because of financial difficulties, we haven't paid them all yet. That's all I can say."

The indictment and criminal information covered both the concession and the after-hours club. The indictment charged failures to return and pay in the quarter from October 1 to December 31, 1946, and the information covered April 1 to September 30, 1946.

Property of the old Washington Aviation and Country Club on Bradley blvd., Bethesda, where Grillo had a restaurant and bar concession, was taken over by the Bethesda Country Club in 1947, according to Philip H. Dein, a member of the board of directors of the latter organization, and John S. Dix, present manager. Since the transfer, Grillo has had no connection with the place, they said.

The Spotlight Club, once located at 17th and M sts. nw., and a rendezvous for theatrical talent and musicians, was one of three after-hours spots raided last year by police. Subsequently District tax claims against the place mounted, and it was closed. The furnishings were sold at auction.

Young Victim Of Accident

BILLY SCHMIDT

Lad, 10, Hurt By Motorist At Unlighted Intersection

Condition Critical; Scene Near Boys Club; Braun Says Light Not Needed

A 10-year-old boy was critically injured yesterday while he ran across an intersection near the Southeast Boys Club.

Mothers of boys in the club have repeatedly requested a traffic light at the crossing, 17th and C sts. se., to no avail.

The injured lad was Billy Schmidt, 1613 Holbrook st. ne. He was taken to Casualty Hospital suffering from fractured skull, pelvis, and left leg.

Driver Questioned

Driver of the auto, police said, was Richard J. Silva, a bricklayer, of 3350 Pennsylvania ave. se. Police said his car was going south on 17th st. Police took a statement from him after the accident.

Mrs. Florence Allen, 1813 B st. se., president of the Mothers Club of the Boys Club, said last night that she has "repeatedly" ask the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic to install a signal light at the intersection where Billy was struck down, but that no action was taken. She said her interest stems partly from the fact she has six children in the club.

George Keneipp, director of the Traffic Division, said last night that lights are installed only when a study of intersections on the basis of vehicle and pedestrian traffic, and accidents, indicates need. A total of 56 intersections already have been designated for lights, he said, but funds for only 13 are available before June 1, 1950.

Wallace L. Braun, engineer of the division, said the 17th and C st. se., intersection was studied and found not to need a signal.

Ambulance, Car Collide

A Navy ambulance and an auto were in collision yesterday at Wisconsin and Western aves. nw., but only one of the four occupants of the two vehicles was injured. He was John Kelly, 42, of 1017 20th st. nw., a passenger in the auto. He was treated at Georgetown University Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Driver of the auto, police said, was Earnest English, 39, 914 Massachusetts ave. nw., and of the ambulance, Oliver I. Tyler, 29, Gaithersburg, Md. Leonard Jung, ambulance passenger, who was being taken from the Naval Gun Factory to the Navy Hospital at Bethesda, completed his trip with the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad.

Wounds Slight

Girl, 15, Uses Sister, 4, to Shoot Self

Apparently using her 4-year-old half-sister to help her pull the trigger, a 15-year-old girl shot herself here yesterday, she told police. The girl's relatives believe it may have been from disappointment in a romance.

Ruth Hagen, 5816 Seventh st., nw., was transferred to the psychiatric ward of Gallinger Hospital after it was determined that her wounds were not serious.

Ruth was found lying on the basement floor of her home by her mother, Mrs. Conrad F. Corpuz, who had rushed down after hearing a sharp report she thought was an explosion.

Going down, she had met her 4-year-old daughter, Gloria Corpuz, Ruth's half-sister, who was sobbing, "Ruthie told me to shoot her."

Ruth told police, they said, that "she meant to shoot herself." From conversations with her and Gloria, it was reconstructed that the half-sisters had placed a clothesline around the tigger, and with the barrel pointing at Ruth, had pulled it.

Ruth had lately been in the habit of going to the neighborhood movie every day, seeing the same picture, "Torture Ship," over and over, according to her uncle, Elmer Van Ness, a taxi driver, of 4226 6th st. nw.

Suspecting that she may have been going there to meet someone, the uncle said he trailed his niece to the theater Monday and that she sat through four hours of a South Sea Island picture, most of the time looking at the clock and not at the picture.

Van Ness theorized that his niece had been meeting a boy at the movie house and that she was disappointed when he didn't turn up Monday.

Mrs. Corpuz said her daughter had talked about her boy friend, saying he was nice looking and that he liked her and she liked him—but that she would never bring him around to meet the family.

But Mrs. Corpuz also thought possibly her daughters had been up to a game of cops and robbers that had gone wrong.

Police, because of the girl's age, recorded the affair as an accidental shooting.

Ruth told police that she got the American double-action .32-caliber revolver from her stepfather's dresser drawer. It was unloaded and she went to the china closet and found a single shell.

Mrs. Corpuz said her daughter refused to answer her repeated question, "What did you do this for, Ruth?"

But 4-year-old Gloria kept crying, "Mother, I didn't want to do it but she told me to do it."

When police came Gloria burst into fresh tears: "You're not going to arrest me, are you? I didn't mean to do it . . ."

No, the police reassured her, they weren't. They began to work on the theory that the children had found the gun and the shooting had been accidental. They asked Gloria to reenact the scene and gave her the revolver. She could not pull the trigger.

Then the story of the clothesline came out and then from Ruth the words finally that she "meant to shoot herself."

Parking Rules Eased to Spur Housing Jobs

Moving to stimulate residential construction here, the District Zoning Commission yesterday approved new regulations reducing the number of parking spaces builders must provide for multiple housing.

The series of liberalizing amendments to the city's off-street parking regulations in residential areas are the result of a year's study and public hearings by District planning officials.

Robert O. Clouser, Commission planning director, said one amendment clears the way for the long sought 500-capacity parking garage for George Washington University students and faculty.

At hearings last Spring, Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d., vice president of the University, described the parking situation there as "rapidly becoming intolerable" and as resulting in many students and teachers leaving the school.

Most significant parking change, said Clouser, is a new ruling which permits contractors to provide only one parking space for every 12 efficiency apartment units in Residential "C" and "D" areas. Previously, builders had to allow one space for every four such units in "C" areas, and one for every five units in "D" areas.

Another basic off-street parking amendment reduces from the present 200 square feet to 150 the area considered necessary to park one car.

Washington real estate spokesmen have long opposed existing parking facility requirements on new apartments on the ground they raise construction costs and are forcing developers to shift operations into nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Clouser pointed out that the approved amendments represent a compromise between what the building industry wanted and the proposals drafted last winter by the nine-man Parking Committee of the District Zoning Commission.

Amendments Possible

Clouser said the Zoning Commission will consider the possibility of further amending these regulations by action of the Board of Zoning Adjustment in cases where economic hardship or unusual factors warrant it.

Here are the parking facilities local builders must now provide for the following types of new buildings as opposed to previous regulations:

Type building	New regulations	Old regulations
Single family	1 space for each dwelling unit	same
Flats	1 space for each two dwelling units	same
Lodging, rooming, or boarding house, hotels	1 space for each 10 guest bedrooms	1 for 8
Private clubs, fraternity houses, dormitories	1 space for each 10 beds	1 space for each 8 guest bedrooms
Apartment or tenement houses in "A" area districts	1 space for each 2 dwelling units	same
Apartment or tenement in "B" area districts	1 space for each 4 dwelling units	1 for 3
Apartment or tenement in "C" area districts	1 space for each 6 dwelling units	1 for 4
Apartment or tenement in "D" area districts	1 space for each 6 units	1 for 8
(Efficiency apartments in "C" and "D" areas need only have parking space for every 12 units.)
Hospitals	1 space for each 4 beds	1 for 3
Sanitariums, homes for aged	1 space for each 8 beds	1 for 6
Orphanages, eleemosynary institutions	1 space for each 8 beds	same
High schools, colleges, universities	1 space for each 26 students based on maximum planned classroom capacity	1 for each 15 classroom seats

Changes Mind

Two May Get New Trial in Juror's Act

A juror who didn't know that he could have changed his mind in the jury room may cause a new trial for two brothers convicted of a $61,800 burglary here.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut deferred judgment on the question but said that if the situation in the case was as presented by the juror, Johnnie S. Jones, of 1120 Rhode Island ave. nw., a new trial may be necessary for Stance W. James, 29, of 1332 9th st. nw., and Oliver W. James, 34, of 1600 A st. se.

They were convicted of the burglary of the residence of Richard H. Beckley of 1800 New Jersey ave. nw., but have not been sentenced. Acquitted was codefendant Louis H. Singleton, 40, of 910 Westminster st. nw.

Jones told Judge Schweinhaut that at first he believed that both Stance and Singleton were innocent, but the jury deliberations went on for some six hours after the trial. At this point, Judge Schweinhaut had called in the jury to determine how close to a verdict they were.

The jury foreman estimated they could agree within a half hour.

Thereafter, in the closed jury room, Jones said, the voting began. He said he voted guilty for Stance and then saw that Singleton was to be acquitted.

He said that he told the other jurors that he wished to change his vote as to Stance because the identifying evidence was similar as to both men. But jurors told him that to change his mind at this point would be out of order, he said.

However, he admitted that when he was polled along with the other jurors after the verdict was in, he reiterated that Stance was guilty and Singleton was innocent.

Excavators Strike Appears Certain; Parleys Delayed

The dispute-harassed area construction industry yesterday prepared for another walkout Thursday morning, this time by the operating engineers.

There appeared last night to be little chance that the dispute, like so many others in recent weeks, would be settled before the strike deadline.

The 450 members of Local 77, International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL), are seeking a 25 cents an hour increase in pay and a health and welfare program which would cost the operators another 6 cents an hour. The subcontractors have offered a straight 10 cents an hour increase.

The union's rank and file met Saturday and authorized a strike to win their demands, and their leaders set the walkout for Thursday morning.

Two of the three negotiators for the Excavators Association, representing the operators, are out of town, according to Attorney Fred Rice, so that the employers' committee won't be able to meet with the union representatives until Thursday afternoon. Thus, it appears the strike will take place on schedule.

NLRB Investigates Charges by 2 Unions

The National Labor Relations Board is making two investigations into union-filed charges as a result of a dispute between River Terrace Supermarket and two AFL unions.

One charge alleges the operators of the market, located at 3439 Benning rd. ne., interferred with a union shop election; the other alleges that the employers failed to show good faith in bargaining collectively with the unions.

The operators of the supermarket, Samuel Levin, Irving Herman, and Kenneth Herman, have denied the allegations.

The dispute grew out of a strike called last May 12 by Butchers' Local 555, and Grocery Clerks Local 1501 against the supermarket for recognition as bargaining agents of the company's 60-odd employes. After a strike lasting 3½ days, the company granted the recognition. The contested union shop election followed.

9 Men Appointed To Pick Ruhland Post Candidates

Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday announced formation of a nine-man committee to make recommendations for a successor to District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who retires September 18.

The committee will conduct a country-wide survey of public health doctors and submit three names to the city heads from which they will make the final choice.

The selection group will consist of General J. O. Dean, Assistant Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service; the Rev. Paul A. McNally, dean, Georgetown University Medical School; Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean, George Washington University Medical School; Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean, Howard University Medical School; Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent, St. Elizabeths Hospital; Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., District Medical Society; Dr. Jesse A. Keene, District Medico-Chirurgical Society; Dr. Edward D. Leifer, District Dental Society, and Dr. William T. Grady, of Robert T. Freeman Dental Society, Inc.

Interior Dept. Seeks Reply In Swimming Pool Squabble

The Interior Department yesterday implied the delay in settling the local swimming pool controversy is the fault of the District Recreation Board.

The department issued a statement, in the name of Arthur E. Demaray, National Park Service associate director, declaring it is "awaiting a reply" from the recreation group on its proposal for turning over operation of local recreation facilities to the District agency.

A draft proposal was handed a Recreation Board Committee July 21 and no answer has yet been sent to Interior. Demaray said yesterday he told the committee "that the matter of swimming pool operation, on which there might be more difficulty in negotiation, would be taken up as soon as progress could be made toward agreement on the administration of recreation facilities less subject to controversy."

Rep. Smith of Ohio Enters Naval Hospital

Representative Smith (R., Ohio) entered the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital yesterday for "two weeks for observation and rest."

His secretary, Harry L. Brookshire, said Smith suffered "something like heat prostration during the heat wave last week, and did not recover as well as expected." He said Smith's condition is not serious.

Truman Asks $3,000,000 Again for Sesquicentennial

President Truman yesterday asked Congress again to appropriate three million dollars for financing next year's proposed National Capital Sesquicentennial celebration.

A previous request was turned down by the House, although the Senate went along with the idea of a two-million-dollar appropriation to finance the Sesquicentennial.

With the President's request went a recommendation from Frank Pace, jr., Federal Budget director, recommending approval of the fund. He said the three million would be supplemented by earnings of the commission set up to run the celebration, and by contributions of individuals and organizations.

"Surplus funds from any source will be turned back into the Treasury of the United States," Pace said.

Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, indicated the request for sesquicentennial funds would be given quick attention in the committee.

President Truman recently conferred with Cannon about the sesquicentennial plan.

Elks Set Up Vacation For 150 Area Boys

One-week vacations for 130 boys of the Washington area will begin Sunday under the sponsorship of Elks Lodge 15, Claude Martin, manager of the organization, revealed yesterday.

The boys, all in the 9 to 14-year age bracket, will spend a week at Camp Barrett, just outside Frederick, Md.,

Traffic Tips

3 Don't race or exceed the speed limits. One very common cause of accidents is racing on roads not built for it. Even the professionals on the Indianapolis track sometimes pile up. Chances are, you're not a professional.

If some other driver wants to play tag, let him do it alone. A healthy vacationer on the road is better off than a hospital patient who has only pride that he didn't let someone pass him.

Shell Blast Only Dirties 2 Small Boys

Two small boys escaped injury in Arlington yesterday when a live 22-millimeter shell they found in the street exploded when they hammered it into the ground.

Showered with dirt, but unhurt, were James Brown, 7, of 1613 N. Edgewood st., Arlington, and David Messer, 6, of 2713 N. Franklin rd., Arlington.

The blast occurred as the boys played with the 5-inch shell in front of 1633 N. Edgewood st. Police said the explosion knocked both youngsters to the ground.

Mrs. Katherine Rumbough

Requiem mass for Mrs. Katherine Rumbough, native of Washington and an employe of the D. C. Public Library for nearly 30 years will be said at 9 a. m. today at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, 16th st. and Park rd. nw.

Mrs. Rumbaugh, who was more than 75 years old, was a charter member of the Society of Natives and at the time of her death, Sunday, was chairman of its Welfare committee. She was also a member of the Washingtonians.

Mrs. Rumbough's maiden name was Collins. She graduated from Business High School. The widow of George H. Rumbough, she retired from Public Library seven years ago.

Surviving her are two sisters, Mrs. W. Stuart Hodge of Malverne, Long Island, N. Y., and Mrs. John F. Hickey of Washington. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Construction Lags

Construction of four Fairfax County schools of four rooms each is lagging two to four weeks behind schedule, the county school board was told yesterday. Cannon & Lewis of Alexandria, the builders, said the slow-up was caused by difficulty in obtaining materials. The board, in a resolution, expressed "disappointment" over the report.

The Budget Bureau yesterday informed Commissioner John Russell Young that the new rate had been set at $4.12 a day.

District budget officials explained that they had figured on last year's rate of $4.13 in preparing the coming year's budget, and on the basis of paying for an estimated 4909 patients, they figure a saving of about $18,000.

Motorists Strew Trash

Some Montgomery County farmers are a bit disturbed about the habit they say motorists have of chcucking trash from speeding cars along county roadsides.

The Laytonsville Planning Group of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau yesterday so informed the County Council, and asked the latter body to post warning signs, put up trash baskets, and generally enforce the "no trash" law.

Things are so bad, the farmers wrote the council, that some of their cows and steers die when they eat "metal objects thrown from cars."

Young Off for Vacation

Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday left the city for a two-week vacation at his summer place on the Chesapeake Bay.

New Attack Planned for Slum Clearance

Final revision of the "Comprehensive Plan for Washington" and planning for a new slum-clearance attack will top the agenda of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission's two-day monthly meeting, starting today.

Assured of a $20,000 appropriation for printing the master plan for the city's future development, NCPPC will work out final details for its early publication, planning director John Nolen said last night.

On Thursday afternoon NCPPC will hold a joint meeting with the Washington Housing Association to map out strategy for a city-wide coordinated drive to secure slum-clearance funds to make a start on the long-delayed program.

Polio Victim Moved to Baltimore in Big Van

The Washington Post

IN HOSPITAL HERE—Mrs. Morris Duchin, poliomyelitis victim, talks to Nurse Willie Mae Shepherd and Charles H. Davidson before being transferred to Baltimore in an iron lung. The move was completed successfully

Mrs. Morris G. Duchin, 6445 Fairfax rd., Chevy Chase, Md., a polio victim, was successfully moved yesterday in an iron lung from Gallinger Hospital to Children's Hospital School, Baltimore, for convalescence.

The move was made in a huge van equipped with a special generator to operate the iron lung. A standby crew of men accompanied the vehicle to operate the lung by hand in case of a power failure.

The Washington Post, in a story yesterday on Mrs. Fuchin's removal, erroneously stated that her 3½-year-old daughter also is a polio victim. The child is not, and now is with her grandparents at Elberon, N. J. The Post regrets this error.

Mrs. Duchin is the wife of Lieut. Comdr. Duchin, who is stationed here. He is a cousin of Eddie Duchin, the orchestra leader.

Slot Machine Permit Denied, Prince Georges Faces Court

Prince Georges County Commissioners were ordered by the County Circuit Court yesterday to "show cause" why they denied a Mount Rainier man an application for a slot-machine license.

The order, signed by Judge Charles C. Marbury, followed a petition for a writ of mandamus on behalf of Hal B. Bell, 3424 Rhode Island ave.

Bell, owner of 30 pinball and console-type slot machines, on July 26 was denied a license by the commissioners.

Attorney Robert W. McCullough, representing Bell, noted in the petition that his client had been turned down by the county heads as a result of an order issued by Judge Marbury June 28 which declared unconstitutional the law legalizing slot machine cash payoffs.

The order, according to McCullough's petition, enjoined the commisisoners permanently from issuing slot machine licenses.

McCullough said yesterday his move for the writ of mandamus is aimed at carrying the slot machine issue to the Maryland Court of Appeals. The commissioners have until August 17 to reply to the court order.

World War II Memorial Plan Backed

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) finds the Lincoln Memorial "Washington's most ennobling feature."

He said he visits there regularly every couple of weeks to stand for 10 minutes or so, and watch the crowds, and read over the inscriptions. He said those who visit there automatically take off their hats as they climb the long steps, and after visiting the shrine "they come way feeling better."

"It's a spiritual purifier," he commented.

Douglas told of his visits yesterday in urging a Senate rules subcommittee to approve legislation that would set up a 12-member commission to select a Washington site, and a suitable design for a memorial to the men of all faiths who fought for this country in World War II.

Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), majority leader and author of the legislation, also testified for the measure, along with Representative Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash.) and officers of the national committee set up to sponsor the memorial.

He said a great national function is performed by noble works of art, like the Lincoln Memorial and the proposed memorial, "which have a noble moral purpose."

Senator Theodore Francis Green (D., R. I.), chairman of the subcommittee, indicated strong interest in the plan, particularly in the thought that it should be a "living memorial' to perform a useful function, rather than simply a building.

Others who testified for the plan included Barnet Hodes and Paul C. Clovis, both of Chicago, co-chairmen of the National All-Faith Memorial Committee; Victor Rubin, secretary of the Illinois Commission for Protection of the American Heritage; and C. A. Bethge, Crystal Lake, Ill.

George A. Kingston

George A. Kingston, 61, an optometrist for A. Kahn, Inc., optical company for more than 30 years, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after a two-week illness.

Mr. Kingston, born and schooled in Springfield, Mass., received optical training at the Globe Optical Co. in Boston. He came to Washington in 1914 and joined the A. Kahn company a few years later.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Mann Kingston, 904 N. Wayne st., Arlington, Va., and two daughters, Mrs. George J. Hall, 4810 Bradley blvd., Chevy Chase, Md., and Mrs. Frank T. Palmisani, 3226 N. 20th st., Arlington.

Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Maj. Brown's Funeral Set For Today

Funeral services for Maj. Robert L. Brown, 33, of Fort Myer Post Engineer Office, who died Sunday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Chambers' Funeral Home, 1400 Chapin st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery at 3 p. m.

Major Brown, who entered the service with a first lieutenant's commission in 1938, is survived by his widow, Mrs. Frances G. Brown, who has been living in the 8600 block of Branch rd., Silver Spring; a son, Robert L., jr.; his father, Arvil L. Brown of Jeffersonville, Ind.; a brother, Maurice; and a sister, Mrs. Floy Kelsey, who resides in the Canal Zone.

Major Brown was born in Jeffersonville, Ind., August 22, 1915. He attended public schools and business college there. Shortly after entering military service in 1938 he served with the Civilian Conservation Corps, and from that assignment went to the Canal Zone where he was on duty for 3½ years.

He was ordered overseas and took part in the Okinawa campaign in the Pacific. After the end of World War II he was transferred to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and was reassigned to Fort Myer 2½ years ago. He had been ill at Walter Reed for more than a year.

Major Brown was a member of Kemper Lodge No. 64 and St. John the Baptist Lodge of the Masonic Order in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Sleeping Tablets Apparently Cause Woman's Death

An attractive 27-year-old Capitol Hill secretary died last night apparently from an overdose of sleeping tablets.

According to police, Miss Amorette Bankhead, an employe in the office of Representative Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.) was found in a semiconscious condition in the bedroom of her apartment, 1515 16th st nw., by her roommate, Phyllis McDonald.

Miss McDonald said Miss Bankhead, clad in pajamas, was lying across the bed with an empty sleeping pill box lying on the floor.

She said Miss Bankhead was still breathing and she immediately called police. They arrived with a staff physician from Gallinger Hospital, who pronounced her dead at 7:35 p. m.

Police said the brunette secretary was the daughter of Mrs. Willard Bankhead of Hamlet, N. C., and that she had been treated last year at the Duke University Hospital for a nervous breakdown. She had been receiving psychiatric treatment here, they said.

Coroner Christopher J. Murphy said he would perform an autopsy at the District Morgue at noon today.

W. N. Stocker

Oxford, England, Aug. 2 (AP).—W. N. Stocker, 98, Oxford University's oldest professor died at his home in Brasenose College, Oxford, today.

He was a mathematician and physicist and had been at Oxford since he entered as a student 80 years ago.

13th Polio Case Reported

The thirteenth polio case in the District this year was reported yesterday by health officials.

The latest victim is an 8-year-old boy living in the 1900 block of 18th st. ne. He was admitted to Children's Hospital on July 30. On this date last year 14 District cases had been reported.

Final Rites For Murphy Here Today

Funeral services for Commodore John Vernon Murphy, 57, who died Sunday of a heart attack, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. in Presbyterian Church of the Pilgrim, 22d and P sts. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery, with Rear Admiral William M. Thomas, chief of Navy chaplains, officiating.

Commodore Murphy died in Q st. nw., shortly after leaving the home of his sister, Mrs. John David Robnett of 1738 Q st. nw.

Commodore Murphy, who was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1919, was born in Brownwood, Tex.

He was one of the Navy's leading submarine commanders and a graduate of the submarine school at New London, Conn.

He received the degree of master of science in communications engineering from Yale University, where he studied radio engineering.

From 1927 to 1929 he was attached to the Navy Department's radio division. After a brief period of service in the Philippines, he was recalled to Bureau of Engineering of the Navy and worked in the radio division again from 1932 to 1934.

He was for three years an instructor in the Naval Academy's postgraduate school, and became deputy director of the Navy's communication division in 1943, a position he held until his retirement in 1946.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Pearce Murphy, of 3420 Lorcom lane, Arlington; a son, John V., jr.; a daughter, Miss Anne Murphy and three sisters, Mrs. Robnett, and Mrs. Will Turner and Mrs. Mary A. Stone of Brownwood, Tex.

William Schinnerer

Funeral services for William Schinnerer, 74, retired linotype section foreman at the Government Printing Office, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia ave. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Schinnerer

Mr. Schinnerer died suddenly Sunday at his home, 3637 Warren st. nw., following a heart attack.

Born and educated in Indiana, he came to Washington to enter Government service at the printing office in 1893. He retired in 1938 after 45 years of service. At that time he was a foreman in charge of printing Congressional Records.

At his death he was the oldest member of the National Lodge No. 12, F. A. A. M.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Isabel Koontz Schinnerer, a native Washingtonian, he married here 53 years ago.

H. Gordon Scott

Funeral service for H. Gordon Scott, 435 Buchanan st. nw., who died Sunday night at his home, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

He is survived by two daughters, Miss Mary Gordon Scott and Miss Lenora Gordon Scott of the home. He was born in Melbourne, Australia, and came to the United States in 1924. Mr. Scott was a free-lance writer and lecturer.

Father Grattan Funeral Rites Set for Thursday at New York

A solemn high mass of requiem will be offered for the Rev. John E. Grattan, S.J., former dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Georgetown University, at 11 a. m. Thursday in the St. Ignatius Catholic Church in New York City. Burial will be in St. Andrew-on-Hudson.

Fr. Grattan

Father Grattan, who was president of the Regis and Loyola High Schools in New York, died Monday in St. Francis' Hospital there after an illness of two months. He was 54.

Born in New York, Father Grattan attended St. Ignatius School and Fordham Preparatory School, New York, and entered the Society of Jesus at the St. Andrew-on-Hudson Novitiate in 1912.

After two years of classical study, he took a course in philosophy at Woodstock (Md.) College. In 1919 he was assigned to the Georgetown Preparatory School in Garrett Park, Md., where he taught classics for two years.

He was transferred to Georgetown University in 1921 and in 1923 began theological studies at Woodstock College. He was ordained in 1926 and in 1930 became a secretary for the American Assistancy at the Curia of the Society of Jesus in Rome.

Returning to this country in 1934, Father Grattan was named dean at Georgetown University, where he served for eight years. In 1943 he was stationed at the Loyola House of Retreats, Morristown, N. J., and the next year became vice president and regent of St. Peter's College, Jersey City.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Agnes C. Grattan Budds of New York.

Rescheduling Hikes Pay in Montgomery

In Silver Spring

Mock Rulers Do Not Want A City Setup

Rescheduling of jobs and pay—which will mean slight pay increases for about 120 Montgomery County employes—was approved yesterday by the Montgomery County Council.

The new schedules were recommended by the County Personnel Board and will be retroactive to July 1.

Lewis B. Sims, board chairman, said the immediate cost to the county would be about $9000 annually. The new job classification schedule simplifies the present 49 grades into 19.

Sims estimated it will take about $3000 yearly to fit employes affected into the new grades nearest their old ones without lowering their present salaries. About 100, he said, will receive pay increases of up to $30 a year.

A 10 per cent cost-of-living increase will go to the 15 county public health nurses, who were denied it two years aga, which will account for the remaining $6000 of the cost to the county.

County Manager Irving G. McNayr informed the council a contract for purchase of 12 new Ford police scout cars was awarded to the Rockville Motor Co., at $1506 a car.

After discussing the plans and problems of Silver Spring at two sessions, the unofficial "mayor" and "city council" last night expressed itself as against incorporating the community—a procedure that would provide a real mayor and council.

The mock legislative body, elected in a popularity poll to serve during "Shop Silver Spring Week," adopted the resolution opposing incorporation on the grounds that incorporation would mean increased taxes.

Meeting at the Liquor Dispensary Board building in Silver Spring, the "mayor" and six-man "council" also recommended two swimming pools and a large auditorium for the area, construction of a parmanent youth center and widening of Georgia avenue north from Silver Spring to Glenmont.

A. G. Johnson Retires as Plant Expert

Dr. A. G. Johnson, widely known plant pathologist, has retired after 35 years in the Department of Agriculture's bureau of plant industry, soils and agricultural engineering, identifying and investigating diseases of soil and forage crops.

He is a specialist on the fungus and bacterial diseases of wheat and other grains. He aided in a study of the selenium poisoning of cattle in South Dakota 20 years ago. Recently he was on a committee of scientists appointed to survey the sporadic and widespread "X" disease of cattle in an attempt to find its cause.

Dr. Johnson is the author or co-author of some 60 bulletins and articles on diseases of grain and forage crops, and worked with geneticists in getting the breeding of hybrid corn under way in several Middle Western States. He lives with his wife at 3408 Rodman st. nw.

3 Navy Workers Total 106 Years of Service

Three civilian employes of the Navy Bureau of Supplies and Accounts have retired with a total of more than 106 years of government work.

They are Edgar F. Ruark, 44 years; Mrs. Margaret C. Plunkett, 31 years, and Miss Hope Knickerbocker, 32 years.

Mr. Ruark retired as accountant of the Office of the Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Supplies. Mrs. Plunkett was a fiscal accounting clerk in the Bureau's Audit Division. Miss Knickerbocker stepped down as head of the bidder's branch of the procurement division of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Miss Viola King Quits After 32 Years' Service

Miss Viola R. King, who during World War II was in charge of the section responsible for worldwide assignment of Army officers, has retired after 32 years continuous Federal service.

A native of Washington, she entered the service in 1917, and served with the Adjutant General's office for practically the entire period. She was assistant chief clerk, Assignment Branch, Personnel Bureau, Adjutant General's Office, when she stepped down on July 30.

Wisconsin Boy Elected U.S. 'President'

Mike Hammond, who wants someday to be a medical missionary—to the United States, last night was elected Boy President of the United States.

Election of the 17-year-old Appleton, Wis., youth climaxed sessions yesterday of the fourth annual American Legion-sponsored Boys' Forum of National Government at American University.

Boy President Mike will meet the Nation's grown-up President, Harry S. Truman, today at the White House. With him will be the 96 other delegates to the forum. Both Presidents are expected to have a few words to say.

James O. Turner, 17, of Trenton, Mo., which is 123 miles from Independence, was elected vice-president. During the party convention a supporter had urged his nomination with the declaration that Missouri had provided one good vice-president not long ago, why not another?

Hammond and Turner ran on the Nationalist Party ticket, defeating the Federalist Party slate of Robert R. Ball, jr., 17, Garden City, Kan., for president, and James Robinson, 17, Blackwell, Okla., for vice president.

Mike will finish high school next year, then enter the University of Wisconsin to study theology and medicine and be a medical student in time, not to China, but to this country, where he feels medical missionaries are greatly needed, too.

Politically, Mike comes from a family of "free-thinkers," he says --they don't vote straight Republican or Democratic tickets, but for the men who they feel are the best candidates.

Trade Unit to Hear Plea for Refusal To Indorse Chest

The Federation of Business Men's Associations, Inc., at a special meeting tonight, will be asked to refuse indorsement of the Community Chest.

Louis F. Frick, federation secretary, said he and Jerome McKee, vice president and acting president, would advise against indorsement at the meeting scheduled for 8 p. m. in the American Security & Trust board room.

Frick said he and McKee are two of three members of the group's Community Chest committee. The third is Benjamin Striner, who has been out of town.

Boys Club Trustees To Visit Camp Reeder

Several score members of the board of trustees of the Washington Boys Club are expected to motor to Camp Reeder today to celebrate the organization's twenty-fifth anniversary.

They will spend the day with the 100 boys encamped in the camp area some 52 miles from Washington in Charles County, Md. Among the trustees will be Boys Club president E. K. Morris, and executive director Charles Fyfe.

Catholic U. Hot Weather Concerts End

By Paul Hume

Emerson Meyers, pianist, and George Wargo, violist, concluded a series of five summer concerts at Catholic University last night.

The programs, embracing a variety of musical forms, were presented by the summer music division of the university. Last evening's recital accounted for three sonatas for the two instruments, two movements of a fourth.

Handel, Brahms, Mozart, and a Sonata by Meyers gave good balance. Wargo is a smooth, proficient master of the viola. His instrument has a lighter tone than some, and he emphasizes its lyrical qualities rather than the more rugged moods possible with the lower-voiced member of the viol family.

Emerson Meyers' pianism, as we have had previous occasion to note, is big—big in style, big in tone, and in its reflection of his concept of music. He can control it any way he wishes which is a rare virtue. His sonata was the most interesting piece on the program.

It too gives a feeling of spaciousness. The principal themes are of real breadth and the writing for both instruments calls for the utmost virtuosity. The excitement created in the last movement results from both brilliant writing and playing. The middle movement is a fantasy with the viola moving improvisatorially. Throughout the first section, I kept thinking of Ernest Bloch. This mood passed as the sonata progressed. It is a fine work and stood well with its companions.

Mozart and Handel fared well with both players. The Brahms F Minor sonata has always seemed a bit long for what it says, but its reading was warm.

Man Kills Self After Kissing Wife Goodby

After asking his wife to kiss him, Robert O. Pace, 48, a guard at the Library of Congress, shot himself through the head yesterday morning in their apartment at 230 8th st. se.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. Pace and J. Mason Evans, landlord in the building, told Dr. Murphy she was packing to return her 12-year-old son by a previous marriage to Hendersonville, N. C. Pace could not get along with the boy, she said.

She told Dr. Murphy her husband had threatened suicide the night before, but she thought she had successfully hidden his gun.

At his request, she said, she kissed him as he lay on the bed, then turned again to her packing. In a moment she heard the shot. Pace was dead when Dr. Fred Burkey of Casualty Hospital arrived.

Hughes Sentenced To 15 Years in Woman's Murder

Elwood T. Hughes, 23, was sentenced yesterday to serve 15 years to life imprisonment for second-degree murder.

Hughes, who resided at 8 Rhode Island ave. nw., had been indicted on a charge of first-degree murder in the attempted rape and robbery strangulation of Mrs. Edna Crump, 25, of 2355 Sherman ave. nw., in an alley in the rear of the 600 block of Columbia rd. nw., on the morning of March 27. He was allowed to plead guilty to the lesser charge, however.

Sentencing was by Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court. It was the maximum penalty for the offense.

Man Charged In Shotgun Death of Wife

A charge of manslaughter was lodged against a 42-year-old mechanic yesterday in the shotgun death Monday of his wife, Mrs. Hazel Clements, 34, in their Rogers Heights (Md.) bungalow.

The charge followed more than two hours of questioning, ending with a statement signed by the man, John Richard Clements, in which, Prince Georges County police reported, he said the gun was accidentally discharged.

Clements was released in $1500 bond and a preliminary hearing set for 10 a. m. Monday in Hyattsville Police Court.

County Detective Earl Huber, who said the manslaughter charge and the $1500 bond had been recommended by Assistant State's Attorney Hervey Machen, told reporters Clements furnished this account:

Clements and his wife had been drinking "off and on" since Saturday night. Monday evening after dinner Clements decided to get his .410 gauge shotgun and go to the basement for some target practice.

Clements got the gun out of the hallway closet. He always kept a shell in the gun's single barrel, he told police.

In attempting to insert a five-shell clip into the gun, the shell already in the chamber was discharged. Pellets and wadding struck his wife in the abdomen.

The mechanic said he didn't know where his wife came from. When she fell, "he thought she was kidding," Huber reported. Then he saw she had been shot.

An autopsy performed yesterday by Dr. John T. Malone, deputy medical examiner, disclosed Mrs. Clements, a typist for the National Wildlife Federation, had been struck by five lead pellets and three peces of wadding.

Detective Huber said Clements admitted that the death would have not occurred if he had not been drinking.

No Bids Offered

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Maryland ran into more trouble today in its plan to bridge Chesapeake Bay. Nobody offered a bid on the construction of two large islands around support piers for the long center span of the seven-mile crossing.

GOP Women Are the Life of the Party

By Genevieve Reynolds

While the male politicos of the GOP National Committee were selecting a new chairman, the National Federation of Women's Republican clubs has renovated its headquarters, inaugurated a news letter and face-lifted its files.

Moreover, the organization has administered a grass-roots adrenalin shot of work to its membership. So across the country federation members are on the qui vive for the forth-coming congressional elections as well as the Presidential campaign in 1952.

And for the first time in its history, the federation now has its own, separate headquarters on the top floor of a building at 1337 Connecticut ave.

In a few short weeks the headquarters have been transformed into a pleasant, livable working spot. Completely redone from ceiling to floor, the visitor finds herself surrounded by spirited elephants. Up and down the walls in the president's office, charging, yellow-colored elephants outdistance pink spearmen. The elephants (symbol of the GOP) are portrayed on dark green wallpaper. A large bambo screen covers the opposite side of the room, and a soft gray carpet on the floor and vases of flowers complete the decor. Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, federation head, not only designed the motif, but personally paid for the renovations.

Slip covers are of dark green to match background of the wall paper. The D. C. League of Republican Women lent the furniture.

Equally attractive is the reception room with its white, red-combed hens and roosters projected against a dark background on the wallpaper. White flower stands and verdant growing plants give an atmosphere of alert aliveness.

Dynamic Betty Farrington is spearheading the federation's revitalized program and technique as well as redecorating headquarters.

One of the most significant new projects is the launching of a Washington News Letter, written entirely by congressional wives. Composing the editorial staff are Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Mrs. Styles Bridges, Mrs. Carroll D. Kearns, Mrs. Robert Hale, Mrs. Walter H. Judd and Mrs. Harris Ellsworth. Not only does it go out to federation members but non-Republican organizations as well.

Going on the old saw that if you want news to spread the three best mediums are telephone, telegraph and tell a woman, the news letters first flash tag line is "Telewoman."

Commenting on the stepped up distribution of federation literature, Mrs. Farrington observed, "We have been telling the GOP stories to ourselves too long. Now we will branch out and tell the story to other GOP organizations.

Mrs. William S. Culbertson, a former president of the D. C. League of Republican Women, is now filling the national federation coffers as finance chairman.

An intensified membership drive also is under way with Mrs. Inez M. Dalton of Arlington as membership director of the Southern region.

And around headquarters there's an increasing number of local volunteer workers. Hence in the precincts as well as on the walls of the GOP elephant is on the move.

Mrs. John McClintock Women Voters Head

Mrs. John C. McClintock will serve as president of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters for the coming year.

Serving with Mrs. McClintock will be Mrs. Earle Simrell, first vice president; Mrs. Donald Beatty, second vice president; Mrs. R. Vance Johnson, treasurer, and Mrs. George Spangler, secretary.

Man Who Plans to Marry This Year or Next Reproaches His Widowed Mother Because She Objects to Sharing Her Home With His Bride

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been a widow for 10 years and I have three children. The eldest is married. The youngest is now away at college; and the second, a son, still at home, is planning to be married this year or next. He poses the problem.

He has made it clear to me that he doesn't intend to start housekeeping immediately after marriage, but that he and his bride will live here with me, paying board, of course, until they have saved enough to buy a place of their own. Fine for them. I don't want it.

I returned to office work after my husband's death and I shall continue this self-help program; but I have no intention of cooking and caring for one more person—rather than one less—after Eric marries. How can I make him understand this, now, before he and his girl go ahead with such selfish plans?

Mother Carries Burdens Enough

I HAVE already told Eric that he shouldn't marry until he can make a home for his wife; but he says he cannot tell his girl that his mother doesn't want her to live "with us." That's not the point, in my opinion.

I firmly believe that all young people should start out on their own, if at all possible; and furthermore I have worked hard enough both in business and at home, without taking on the additional work and the adjustments that would be my portion, if I tried to accommodate the newlyweds in my apartment. Does this attitude of mine amount to shirking a duty? Please advise. E. V.

Man Is Trying to Cajole Two

DEAR E. V.: It doesn't make sense for Eric to state that he can't tell his girl that you don't want her to "live with us." Why can't he tell her? Why would he tacitly deceive her about your firm opposition to the idea? And why does he try to confuse your mind and "take the castle" by emotional pressure?

It strikes me that Eric is running to and fro, trying to put over a deal between two women neither of whom relishes the implications of his economics. I'll wager the girl is dragging her feet about living with you, even as you are declaiming against it, and that's why he feels he can't tell her just where you stand.

For advice—buck up; stand by your convictions without mincing words. I notice a tendency to back down when Eric questions the "delicacy" of your attitude, for you say your blunt personal preference isn't the point. I think it is; and considering the circumstances, it is perfectly valid.

Righteous Adjustment in Family Relations

THERE COMES a season in family relationships, when children are grown and parents are life-worn, when new adjustments are in order,—adjustments which relax pressure-demands on parents as such, and require the rising generation to "do" for themselves and begin to give something to others besides.

Once upon a time it was assumed that children were eternal debtors to parents and could never do enough to "repay" for the "gift" of life; and more recently we've heard a lot of an equally purblind school of thought which presumes that parents, on the other hand, can never do enough for children to "atone" for bringing them into this world of ours.

Justice in human relations, based on respect for individual rights, won't be served by either of these extremes. Rather I say there comes a season when parents should be "delivered" from servitude to children, just as children should be released from parents and indeed required to go free and "get going" on their own steam. You have entered this season with Eric, so don't give ground to his unfair demands. M. H.

British Fashion Arbiter Trims Skirts 3½ Inches

By Geraldine Hill

LONDON, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Hardy Amies, Britain's Christian Dior, gave fashion-conscious women one big headache today by cutting his fall skirts three and a half inches shorter than last season.

For Amie's large clientele, it means getting out that needle and thread, or changing their fashion dictator this fall.

The handsome designer also introduced the "envelope" skirt, one of the most interesting style features in this week's haute couture showings.

Amies described it as, "a bone-straight skirt, with either single or double flaps wrapping over at the back to cover the zipped placket and side slits."

The neckline was the focal point of many of his 54 creations. Prominent collars and often decorated revers stood out in the day gowns, and folds and fischus in the evening wear.

Magyar Sleeves

Materials were chiefly smooth and firm. Cumberland and Yorkshire tweeds, and a red Scottish hopsack for day suits; French rayons and rayon jerseys for afternoon and cocktail wear, and wonderful French rayon taffeta, satin and rayon brocade for evening gowns.

Interesting details were the Magyar sleeves on sexy, black dresses; th eloose-fitting Irish-tweed jacket lined with nutria-dyed coney; leather belts covered with peacock feathers; drop sequins and jet embroidery used to accent front and back on dinner dresses and a cascade of material like a mermaid's tail on a brocade evening gown.

"Clipper," a lovely ensemble of Scottish camelhair topcoat worn over a honey-colored Yorkshire wool jersey dress. The coat had a big, stand-up collar and huge, slanting buttoned-back hip pockets. A feathered leather belt caught the graceful flowing skirt of the dress at the waist.

A spectacular, Cumberland tweed coat in all colors of the rainbow with an enormous stand-up collar.

A hyacinth-colored French rayon dress, knotted and draped across the bust, gathered at the waistline, and flowing swiftly across the hipline.

A slinky, black velvet evening coat with collar and cuffs of raised jet bugle beads worn over a seductive black jersey dress with identical beading on the full bosom and hipline.

Morton Goes Scottish

MEANWHILE, Digby Morton today displayed a fall collection as Scottish as a bagpipe, featuring Cairnform crystals and plaids in the pattern "Bonnie Prince Charlie" wore in his flight to France.

The designer, a native of Ireland, also looked across North Channel to Scotland for inspiration in the selection of accessories. Kilt pins held fringed, pleated skirts in place and silver replicas of highland dirks pierced felt berets.

A distinctive feature of the collection was the "architectural look," inspired by Morton's early house-planning studies. Cleverly-cut dresses and suits were highlighted by bits of "structural" detail, such as striped pockets which gave the illusion of three dimensions on a flat surface.

The designer followed the general trend of London fall fashions toward straighter silhouettes with "movement" to the left. A coat had a scarf effect repeated in a panel on the left side, and a cocktail dress featured a floating panel of velvet and faille down the left hip.

The Scottish emphasis was illustrated by a knife-pleated skirt in a red, yellow and green plaid, worn with a deep red velvet jacket and a matching plaid stole.

The plaid was in a pattern first made about 1712 for followers of Britain's ousted Stuart kings. "Jacobite" supporters of former King James II wore the plaid as a secret sign of loyalty to James' son, "The Old Pretender," and Bonnie Prince Charlie.

Morton's topcoats were tight-fitting, with huge Danton collars. A brown wool coat with a high collar was suggested for wear over a simple brown wool dress with knife-pleating from just below the bust to the hemline.

A red coat with a high astrakhan collar had one long astrakhan lapel and was worn with a matching fur hat and an eye veil of black lace.

A sumptuous brown tie-silk suit had jet embroidery on the lapels and cuffs and edging the jacket, which was cut in castellated fashion around the hips.

A striped taffeta cocktail dress had only one sleeve.

Party Reveals Engagement

Salvador Embassy Hums With News of Bethrotal

THE PARTY given by the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro yesterday at the embassy on Wyoming ave. nw. was a gala occasion for the young folk of the Latin American diplomatic contingent. But it was a superspecial event for the honoree, pretty, blue-eyed Senorita Maria Teresa Barraza of Panama City, Panama. Unofficially it made known her engagement to Benjamin R. Castro, son of the hosts.

A formal announcement of the engagement will be made later by Maria Teresa's parents, Dr. and Senora de Barraza, who are now in Panama City. Dr. Barraza served as Panamanian Minister to the Court of St. James's and to Denmark.

As Benjamin greeted his friends yesterday he remarked, "I wanted to introduce you to my fiancee."

Both Are Students

The bride-to-be is a senior at Maryland University and the future bridegroom is a law student at Georgetown University.

Senora de Castro, gowned in a pretty navy blue sheer afternoon frock, topped with an orchid, and Senorita Barraza, who wore a handsome beige lace afternoon frock were aided in receiving by the Ambassador, their sons Benjamin and Dr. Alexandria Castro.

Washington's humidity seemed nonexistent as the guests gathered around the dining room table sampling delicious dainties. One of the most popular dishes was a watermelon rind filled with watermelon balls, slices of cantaloupe, fresh peaches and cherries.

Glimpsed around the melon bowl were the Guatemalan Ambassador, Dr. Don Ismael Gonzales-Arevalo, the handsome Ambassador from Costa Rica and his beautiful wife, Senora Mario Esquinel, the First Secretary of the El Salvador Embassy and Senora de Siri.

Others Attending

Also in the group were Julio Heurtematte, formerly Commercial Counselor of the Panamanian Embassy, now with the Organization of American States, and Mr. and Mrs. James Moran.

From the younger set came Enrique Ferrer of Argentina; Dr. Jose Bravo of Colombia; Enrique Kempff of Bolivia; Felipe Portocarreso of Peru; Jose Alfredo Adrianzen of Peru; Maj. John Huba, Maj. Jerre Boggs, Andre Kahn of the Philippines; Joseph Cunningham, Fernando and Jorge Hazera of Costa Rica; Fernando Ortuno of Costa Rica; Carlos Valenzuela of Argentina; Jaime de Pinies of Spain; Pedro Pereira of Portugal; Jorge Barreiro of Uruguay; Pancho Pardini of Panama.

Guests also included Senoritas Sesita Lequerica of Spain, niece of the Spanish Ambassador; Marina Prado of Spain, daughter of the Air Attache; Gladys Terrados of Argentina, daughter of the Assistant Military Attache; Gladys Mora, of Uruguay, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador to the Organization of American States; Maria Lina Julia of Puerto Rica; Vilma Falcon; Crelo Aramburu, daughter of the Peruvian Minister Counselor; Maria Cristina Beltinera of Guatemala; Gibby Ferris, Maxime Hammond, Elizabeth Wilkes, Mimi Wilkes, Mary S. Price, Sonia Massey and Carlotta Pardini of Panama.

Girls' Nation To Hear Mundt, 2 Top Officials

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews and Senator Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota will be among the guest speakers at the third session of Girls' Nation in Washington August 21-27.

This national school of citizenship training, conducted by the American Legion Auxiliary, will be held at American University. Mrs. Hubert A. Goode, national president of the auxiliary, has announced that Mrs. John Engesather will be chairman of Girls' Nation.

Mrs. Engesather reports that 98 young women, two from each State in the Union, who were delegates to Girls' State and have studied citizenship on a State level, will be guests at Girls' Nation. To be eligible, girls must have been members of Girls' State and have finished their junior year in high school.

In Washington, the girls will set up a miniature national government of their own and form two political parties, the Nationalists and the Federalists. They will nominate candidates, elect officers and carry out the legislative, and judicial functions of government.

Philippine Envoy Is Honored by Embassy Staff

Staff members of the Philippine Embassy and their wives gave an annual asalto (surprise) party last evening in honor of the birthday anniversary of their Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde. The group gathered at 7:30 p. m. at the chancery and from there proceeded to the embassy. The ladies wore native terno costumes and the men were in barong tagalogs.

A television set was presented to the Ambassador, and a 10-pound cake centered the buffet. The cake was iced on top with a replica of the Ambassador's yacht, Limbas III. "Happy birthday to our Admiral from the Crew" was scrolled across in red and three candles marked the three years in which Dr. Elizalde has served as Ambassador.

A musical program was offered by Miss Enya Gonzale, soprano, Manuel Bautista, violin, and Benjamin Tupas, pianist.

Posture Habits Formed In Crib

Good posture habits start on the crib mattress. Long before a baby starts to crawl or walk, the foundation is being laid for good or bad posture according to whether he has a firm, level mattress or one that lets his developing bone structure sag. A very firm and absolutely level new mattress, unused by any other child, is the birthright of every new baby.

About Suggestions on Moving

TO D.T.S., who requested information on moving: In the first place, I suggest that you request bids from three separate companies and after comparing them make your decision. I found this practical in my recent experience of moving from Philadelphia to Washington. If you can't afford a contact under which the moving company packs everything for you, proceed as follows:

Let the company pack your good China and glassware, any phonograph records, mirrors and pictures. They are then responsible for possible damage and they can do a better job of packing fragile things than you can.

Let them bring clothes wardrobes (about $5 each and your clothes arrive with no need of pressing or cleaning. Two wardrobes served for all the summer and winter clothes of my husband and myself.

For your own packing, go to a liquor store and get whisky cartons. Moving men hate huge, bulky cartons and the liquor store carton is a nice size. Use these without their inner sections for books, cooking utensils, etc.

To pack drugs, perfumes and other liquids, canned goods, spices, condiments, and electric bulbs, use liquor store carton with sections. Stuff each section—top, bottom, and sides—with shredded newspaper (better than excelsior). Wrap bottle in many folds of newspaper and wedge tightly in section of carton. Be sure cap or stopper is sealed tight.

Don't pack matches, bullets, cleaning fluid, or any other flammable or explosive item. Don't pack liquor, wine, etc.

Pack bureau drawers with linens, etc. In fact, you can stuff china cupboard, buffets, etc., with pillows and bedding. If furniture is to be stored for any length of time, though, this is not advisable.

Large grocery store cartons can be used for lightweight objects—light cooking utensils, cleaning implements, etc. If you have tile-top occasional tables, protect top and sides by tying cardboard and paper around them. Glass in doors on cupboards should be taped several times with adhesive tape or paper.

If you have a record player, be sure the arm is anchored. Be sure moving men bolt or tie the motor in your ice box tightly.

Tip the moving men at both ends of the line. Tip driver if he does any of the heavy moving. Don't tip packers and unpackers. I moved furniture for a 3-story house and tipped $2 each—two men on my job—but I had many heavy book cartons and it was snowing. I tipped the driver, who did much of the hard work, $5. This is rather excessive but the job was under great difficulties.

Pay estimated cost of moving in advance by check, then when load arrives you'll only have say $30 to $60 to pay over in cash. It's better than carrying several hundred dollars with you and movers always must be paid on the spot in cash. There's usually extra weight over the best estimate.

Is there any store here in Washington which sells moisture-proof cellophane? P. R.

One paper supply store on New York ave. which sells moisture-proof cellophane can be reached by calling Republic 5850.

For the benefit of the reader who had two small children and wanted to take a vacation trip in the late summer, tell her to buy Duncan Hines' book, "Lodging for the Night," and its companion on restaurants. The former lists well-appointed tourist homes within a few miles of Washington and several in Virginia. W. T. B.

How does one remove mildew (little black spots) from a very expensive shower curtain? Did I read in your column once something about vinegar? I am careful to keep it spread open when damp, so it can dry as quickly as possible, but in vain. P. E. T.

The vinegar suggested in this column was to remove the soap scum from the curtain. If the mildew is in an area where there is soap scum sponging with vinegar might help to remove it. Or, it is quite possible that this mildew can be removed by laying the curtain on a flat surface and thoroughly washing with soap and water. Sprinkling the stained area with a mild kitchen abrasive as you wash will also help to hasten its removal from the surface. If the fungus growth has penetrated the fabric of the curtain, however, nothing will remove it except sponging it with household bleach, but this probably would affect the color.

One of the best ways to prevent mildew on shower curtains in high humidity weather is to leave the light on in the shower for several hours after it is used. The extra heat is usually all that is necessary to completely dry it. Mildew will form when the curtain stays even a little damp for several days.

Will you discuss the removal of a spot of blood from very light-toned inexpensive wallpaper? G. J. J.

Make a paste of water and cornstarch and apply it to the stain. have the paste only damp for if it is wet some of the liquid may run down the wall. Allow to remain in place until dry and brush away. Treatment may be repeated as long as improvement is seen.

Make Roses Grow on the Next Cake

WILD ROSE CAKE

PREPARATION: Preheat oven and set at 375 degrees Fahrenheit. Line bottoms of two 9-inch or three 8-inch round layer cake pans with two layers of waxed paper. Have all ingredients at room temperature. Sift flour before measuring.

INGREDIENTS:

2½ cups sifted cake flour
4 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups sugar
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg whites

METHOD: Place shortening in bowl. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into bowl. Add 2/3 cup milk and vanilla. Beat 2 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer, or by hand using 150 strokes per minute. Throughout mixing time, keep batter scraped from sides and bottom of bowl with rubber scraper. Scrape bowl and beaters. Add beaten whites and remainder of milk. Beat for 2 additional minutes. Scrape bowl and beaters. Pour equal amounts of batter into each of the two cake pans. Bake at 375 degrees Fahrenheit for about 28 minutes.

SNOWY CREAM FROSTING:

½ cup fine vegetable shortening or white margarine
2 to 2¼ cups confectioners' sugar, sifted
4 tablespoons milk
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening until smooth and creamy. Add sugar, milk, salt and vanilla. Beat until smooth.

WILD ROSES:

6 red gumdrops, 1 inch in diameter
Tinted coconut

Slice gumdrops very thin. Use sharp knife dipped in hot water. Use pieces of gumdrops for petals. Put "stamens" of tinted coconut in center. Put more tinted coconut around sides of cake.

Tinting Coconut: Put 1 or 2 cups shredded coconut in bowl. Mix together 2 tablespoons water and 2 to 4 drops of pink food coloring. Sprinkle tinted water over coconut a few drops at a time. Mix lightly until color is evenly distributed through coconut. Continue adding colored water until coconut is desired tint. Lay colored coconut on paper towel to dry before putting on cake.

Hollywood Offers New 'Wristlet' Fad

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 2.—"Wristlets," a larger and more dramatic form of bracelets, is the latest jewelry fad to stir Hollywood's motion picture stars.

Among the most unusual of these jewelry pieces is one being worn by exotic Jane Russell. Of original design, it consists of strong, light and precious white palladium, which cradles an enormous oval of emeralds and diamonds held in place by a wide band of these same important gems.

With her wristlet, Miss Russell often completes her jewelry ensemble by wearing a simple band of polished palladium around her neck and the currently popular drop earrings.

TOBÉ SAYS—
Fashion's Dramatic

"All the world's a stage"—and there is high drama in fashion today just as there is high drama in life in this tense atomic age. It seems as if we are trying to play all roles at once so that we will not miss out on anything in our lifetime.

Christian Dior put high drama into fashion with his "New Look" and has kept it there ever since. There is high drama in the enormously full tent-like coats. There is high drama in the beautiful fabrics—stiff slipper satins, brocades and Lyons velvets. There is high drama in the revival of casual fashions that contrast so dramatically with formal costumes.

Flashback Spans The Ocean Wide

By Richard L. Coe

HAVE YOU, ladies, a hidden love tucked away in your life? In "One Woman's Story," at the Playhouse, Ann Todd does, and it costs her anxiety aplenty before she finally gets him out of her romantic system.

This is a Very High Class Picture and since it's from a story by H. G. Wells and has been brought to celluloid by the top-flight team of David Lean and Ronald Neame, I hesitate to be scornful. But it somehow smacks of the synthetic.

The story is told in flashback, that stylish Hollywood form which appears to have blown across to Britain. You know the sort of thing: a lady begins telling about what's happened to her and, somehow, you find her giving details of scenes in which she's not had a part. We see her husband or lover alone or with other people, but Ann appears to have been there by clairvoyance. I find this flaw of movie-making in gathering abundance and it makes me openly suspect to find the Lean-Neame combination diving into it.

Ann has gone off to Switzerland for a ration-free holiday. Claude Rains, her wealthy husband, is to follow her from England. But at the same hotel, in the next room, is Ann's girlhood lover, Trevor Howard. Ann recalls to you their meeting of nine years before when she came close to leaving her luxury-affording husband of five years for the professorial inelegance of Howard. But Rains stopped such a move flat in its tracks.

By now Howard is happily married, the father of two children and at ease in his mind over what might have been. Ann, a day-dreamer, sits on their picnic mountain crag and moons to herself on how Howard's caresses might feel today. But the day's events are strictly platonic and only her husband's suspicions set off the near disaster that follows. He sues her for divorce, naming Howard as corespondent, thereby threatening the latter's life fabric. So Ann sees little to do than push her way to a subway platform.

Escape Guaranteed

Coincidences abound. Circumstances, we all know, can make the innocent appear guilty, but for Claude to scuttle down to exactly the right subway platform in the nick of time does seem a bit much.

Still, because this is obviously a picture addressed to romantic ladies, one can't expect otherwise. The playing of the three central roles is impeccable and holds us where lesser players might have betrayed the sticky happenstances of such a story.

Miss Todd ably conveys the stifled romantic spirit of the lady as well as the idea that marriage for anything but True Love is a dangerous move. Trevor Howard, who was so effective in "Brief Encounter," knows exactly how to portray romance on the fringes and Rains is his masterful self. Production details are immensely handsome and escape is guaranteed.

HUMBLE SUGGESTION — To whoever makes up the Meridian Hill Theater program: The slip stating that the action for this week's "No Time for Comedy" takes place "in 1898 at the peak of the Spanish Civil War" was simply amusing; the period remains the 1939 Behrman originally described for Miss Cornell, Sir Laurence Olivier and Margalo Gillmore . . . But in talking of next week's "On the Town," why boast "With Original New York Cast!!!?" . . . This is blatantly misleading: Nancy Walker, Sono Osato and Jerome Robbins will not be down . . . I'm told next week's players were in the original cast, but that's not the same thing as "Original New York Cast!!!"

THE TWO "BELVEDERE" pictures, "Sitting Pretty" and "Mr. B. Goes to College," form a lushly comic double bill, which you'll be able to catch at the Seco, Silver Spring, tomorrow and Friday.

THE TRANS-LUX tonight goes lavish, continuing "The Forbidden Street" through to a final showing at 10:55, but slipping in two showings of "Home of the Brave," which officially opens tomorrow, at 6:30 and 9:30.

TONIGHT brings the opening of C.U.'s final play of the summer, "The Barber of Seville," in the form it had before Rossini turned it into his long-lived opera . . . Dick Sykes has directed and the run continues through next Thursday evening.

TOMORROW will lure a unique audience to the Luray Caverns, where the Barter Theater will be playing "Rock of Ages," a play written especially for the stalagmite-stalactite setting by Barterite Robinson Hare . . . The underground drama starts at 3.

SECOND WEEK GAMBOL—Stephen McNally and Barbara Stanwyck settle for a second week of playmaking on Keith's screen, where they have the leads in "The Lady Gambles." Barbara learns that a winning streak can't last forever

Railroads' Net Off 89 Million In Six Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of Class One railroads totaled $43,400,000 in June, less than half of the 94 million dollars in the same 1948 month, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

Net income for June last year was augmented by Federal Tax credits, the AAR emphasized.

For the first six months this year, Class One roads had an estimated net income of 173 million dollars, compared with 262 million in the same period last year. Operating income for the period totaled $312,690,728, against $410,932,720 in the first six months of 1948.

Aggregate operating revenues in the first half of 1949, according to the AAR, amounted to $4,369,260,739 compared with $4,606,719,256 in the same 1948 period. Operating expenses of $3,555,278,733 were down 2.6 per cent.

NEW PROTEST: The American Bankers Association again protested yesterday revised regulations for Federal savings and and loan associations. The new provisions, announced by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, are scheduled to go into effect August 15. In a letter addressed to William K. Divers, FHLBB chairman, the ABA reiterated its previous objections about describing share accounts as "savings accounts," issuing certificates of deposit and the opening of branch offices.

ODD LOTS: Heavy buying in Potomac Electric Power Co. common stock is attributed to investment trusts. One such firm disclosed that it has purchased 3600 shares of Pepco in the past 30 days . . . Business failures declined to 168 in the week ended July 28 from 182 in the previous week, Dun & Bradstreet reported . . . Industrial Rayon Corp. has resumed full production at its Covington, Va., plant and is recalling workers laid off in June when output was cut back to 50 per cent of capacity . . . Lead prices yesterday advanced another quarter-cent to 14¾ cents a pound, New York basis.

HONOR: A testimonial dinner was given last night for William R. Franck, 68, who has spent 47 years servicing food to local hotels and restaurants. The affair, attended by about 100 persons, was sponsored by the American Business Association and was held at the Hotel 2400. Franck was presented with a brief case.

NEW GAS LINE: The Federal Power Commission has approved construction of a new 26-inch gas pipeline from West Virginia to Rockville, Md., for the transmission of 30 million cubic feet of natural gas daily. Columbia Gas System is speeding construction and expects to complete the new line by December 1. It is expected that Columbia's subsidiary, the Atlantic Seaboard Corp., will begin delivery of the gas to Baltimore by May 1, 1950. The new line is also expected to help the Washington Gas Light Co. meet the increasing demand for natural gas in this area. Columbia now serves Washington Gas Light by means of an existing West Virginia to Rockville pipeline which is south of the new line now under construction.

NO EFFECT: The new Washington sales tax does not apply to security transactions, brokers learned with a sigh of relief. Sales of other intangible items, such as insurance, also are exempt.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Gen. Lucius D. Clay, retired chief of all U. S. forces in Europe, was elected a director of the Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York . . . Paul S. Killian is the new vice president in charge of purchasing for Bethlehem Steel Co., succeeding the late Charles R. Holton . . . Albert O. Steffey, formerly with Montgomery Ward Co., has joined Butler Brothers as president of its subsidiary, Scott-Burr Stores Corp. . . . William R. Waldeisen of Williamsport, Pa., has been elected a director of All American Airways.

MERGER PETITION: The Federal Power Commission yesterday was asked to authorize a merger of Braddock Light & Power Co. with Potomac Electric Power Co. A similar petition was filed Monday with the District Public Utilities Commission. Braddock, a wholly owned subsidiary of Pepco, operates in nearby Arlington County and has total assets of $18,186,539. In the next three years, additional facilities totaling more than 11 million dollars will be added.

EARNINGS: Seaboard Finance Co. reported net income of $1,609,708 or $1.58 a comomn share for the nine months ended June 30, against $1,514,769 or $1.55 a share in the same period of the previous year. Other earnings reports:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—Wheat and corn futures were mixed today, with the market under pressure most of the session. Lard and soybeans made a strong start but later fell under profit taking. Oats were firm most of the time.

Some wheat selling was caused by general trade disappointment over the Government wheat subsidy rates announced yesterday, and also because the subsidies apparently attracted no immediate business. Good rains in parts of the corn belt, and extremely favorable crop news, led to weakness in corn. Oats were strengthened by cash buying.

Lard advanced early on higher cottonseed oil prices and reports of Army plans to buy more lard. Soybeans moved upward with fats and oils generally. Both fell in late trading, however, on profit taking.

Wheat ended ½ lower to ¼ higher, corn was ½ down to ⅛ up, oats were ⅝ higher to ⅛ lower, rye was off 1¼ to 2, soybeans were ¾ to 1½ lower and lard was 15 cents a hundred pounds higher to 5 cents lower.

CAB Blames Crew in Crash At Mt. Carmel

By the United Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board said yesterday that last year's crash of a United Air Lines DC-6 at Mt. Carmel, Pa., might have been avoided if the crew had followed proper emergency procedure.

Showman Earl Carroll and 42 others were killed in the June 18, 1948, disaster.

The Board attributed the crash to the fact that carbon dioxide gas apparently escaped into the cockpit and knocked out the crew. The deadly fumes, it said, presumably came from fire extinguishers the pilot ordered into use when he got a false warning of fire aboard.

Its investigation showed to be closed a cabin pressure relief valve to prevent a dangerous accumulation of gas in the cockpit. Emergency procedure in event of fire aboard a DC-6 requires that the valve be opened before attempting a descent.

The Board held that "too little consideration has been given to the human limitations of crew members in times of stress and danger."

"A fire in flight," it said, "permits little opportunity for the exercise of detached and thoughtful consideration of emergency procedure."

Such limitations, it added, "argue against involved procedures applicable in emergencies."

It noted that the Douglas Aircraft Co., which manufactures the DC-6, is now testing a fire-extinguishing system which would permit the performance of all steps necessary in an emergency by the movement of a single control.

Loyalty Oath Awaits Ruling In Baltimore

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—No action will be taken against public employes who fail to sign loyalty oaths until a court decision on the constitutionality of Maryland's antisubversive laws is handed down.

Yesterday was the deadline for signing of the oaths required by the so-called Ober law.

Attorney General Hall Hammond advised officials to withhold action until Judge Joseph Sherbow of the supreme bench of Baltimore hands, down his decision in two suits attacking the new law. Hammond said the decision should be forthcoming soon after August 8.

Hammond made his opinion public after three Quakers formally refused to sign the loyalty oaths on religious grounds.

The cases against the Ober Act were brought by two officials of the Communist Party of Maryland and by a group of Baltimore business and professional men and women.

Baltimore Woman Slain, Son Accused

Newport, Me., Aug. 2 (AP).—A perplexed-looking Navy veteran, quoted by the county attorney as saying he "had an urge" to kill his mother, was held without bail on a murder charge today.

A plea of innocent was entered for Robert J. Bean, 27, of Newport, in Bangor Municipal Court. He was accused of beating his mother, Mrs. Gladys Bean, 52, of Baltimore, Md., to death at their Sebasticook Lake camp yesterday.

County Attorney John T. Quinn said Bean told him he struck his mother with a hammer "so they could be together always." Bean said he intended to walk into the lake afterward, Quinn related.

Quinn said Bean has been under veterans' hospital treatment for a head injury he suffered in the Navy. He was at the camp on a 15-day pass from the hospital.

Hoover Honored On Anniversary

Congress yesterday unanimously approved a resolution extending greetings to former President Herbert Clark Hoover on his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary August 10.

The House adopted a Senate-approved measure felicitating the ex-Chief Executive.

Republican Leader Joe Martin (Mass.) and Democratic Leader John MacCormack (Mass.) joined in lauding Mr. Hoover.

The resolution expresses gratitude for Mr. Hoover's "devoted service to his country and to the world" and the hope that "he be spared for many more years of useful and honorable service."

Franks Sails for U. S. After Talks in London

Southampton, England, Aug. 2 (AP).—Sir Oliver Franks, British Ambassador to the United States, sailed today on the Caronia for New York. Franks has been in London a month for general consultations with the Foreign Office.

The Ambassador said he planned to spend two or three weeks vacation this month at Nantucket, Mass.

West Virginia Gains Reverse Farm Trend

West Virginia farmers boosted their cash receipts during the first five months this year despite a national downward trend.

A Department of Agriculture report showed the West Virginia figures increased from $33,483,000 in the 1948 five-month period to 33,906,000 for January-May this year. National figures, meanwhile dropped from $10,350,506,000 to $9,819,190,000.

NEW YORK—Mayor O'Dwyer telephoned Mrs. Roosevelt and offered to issue a statement expressing his esteem for her—if she wanted him to . . . Bernard Baruch's return from England was hastened by the touch of gout which developed after spending four days in gay reunion with his friend, Winston Churchill. They also played gin-rummy for four days, and Churchill didn't win a game.

For the first time, the A. F. of L. will try to persuade the farmers that Labor Day is vital to them too: Secretary of Agriculture Brannan has been invited by George Meany of the A. F. of L. to share the platform with him at the big Labor Day rally in Chicago.

Former Premier Paul Reynaud of France, now over 70, hikes 15 miles a day, still tries long-distance swimming, and recently became the father of a boy . . . Jed Harris, the producer, has found another French play for Charles Boyer to do on Broadway, and is at work on the translation now . . . Iva Withers, who played the leading role in "Carousel" on Broadway—she replaced Jan Clayton—has had to turn down four Broadway shows because of her broken ankle. She broke it on the eve of the Chicago premiere of "Carousel," but played the show that night. "I just had to play it," she explained. "I had never faced critics before."

Winthrop Rockefeller's forthcoming book about his experiences during the war will reveal the story of the offer of a post in England made him by Ralph Davies, the petroleum administrator, while Rockefeller was in the Philippines. He asked his father for advice, and John D. Rockefeller jr., sent the reply to Davies and a copy to Winthrop. It stated that Winthrop Rockefeller could not accept the petroleum post for three reasons: (1) He didn't know enough about oil; (2) He didn't have enough experience in management; and (3) He could serve his country better by remaining with the Army.

Canasta is the rage of Paris. Averell Harriman introduced the game there . . . Eddie Foy, jr., saw the thousands of cars streaming towards the Tanglewood Festival—where Koussevitzky and Leonard Bernstein are conducting—and was puzzled by this mass migration to the Berkshires. "Look at 'em," said Foy, "just to see some sucker lead a band" . . . John Price, the cable-editor of the Herald-Tribune, made his first transatlantic crossing on the maiden voyage of the Ile de France. Because of the time differential, the clocks were put back one hour each day. "These 25-hour days," Price wearily reported, "are getting me down."

D. C. Firm's Bid Low for Annex To Prince Georges Hospital

Tentative approval of a low bid of $1,101,597 for a 110-bed addition to Prince Georges County General Hospital at Riverdale was given yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The county heads will meet today with hospital officials to thrash out final details of the overall cost. An expenditure of $1,200,000, with the Federal Government contributing $413,000, was approved previously.

Eight bids were submitted and opened last Friday, Dr. A. K. Besley, hospital superintendent, said. The lowest bidder, he said, was the B. & J. Construction Co. Inc., 3432 Connecticut ave. nw.

Dr. Besley asked the commissioners to authorize issue of $800,000 in bonds to provide the county's share of the construction costs, but action was deferred pending further information as to the cost of equipping the addition.

A $336,000 road construction and improvement program also was announced yesterday by the commissioners.

According to County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman, bituminous surfacing of 67 miles of gravel roads will be carried out during this fiscal year, with some of the work already under way.

The surfacing will cover portions of 61 roads at distances ranging from a tenth of a mile to 3½ miles. The estimated cost is $200,000.

Tayman said the county also will spend another $136,000 for building new roads or reconstruction of old ones, involving a total of 24 projects. Five of the 24 projects are bridges and approaches.

County Assessor Louis W. Kutsch, in other business, was authorized to place on his books, for assessment purpose, a total of 869 small lots over the county which are listed presently as "owners unknown."

The action was taken so they may be included in the tax sale with delinquent properties next March.

Arrest Ends Hunt For Matron's Killer

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 2 (AP).—Police today ended their widespread search for the killer of an elderly society matron with the arrest of her former butler.

Police Chief Frank N. Littlejohn reported Monroe Medlin, 23, a convicted draft dodger, had admitted shooting Mrs. Esley O. Anderson, sr., to death with a shotgun in her home here yesterday.

Moscow Satire Named 'Mad Haberdasher'

Moscow, Aug. 2 (AP).—"The Mad Haberdasher" is the title of a new play now in rehearsal and scheduled for a mid-August premiere, The newspaper Evening Moscow describes it as a satire on the North Atlantic Pact.

Childbirth Figures Show D. C. Is Leader

The District was among the leading communities in the country in medical attention for child birth in 1947, according to a report yesterday by Oscar R. Ewing, Social Security administrator. That is the last year for which full statistics are available.

In Washington, 96.8 per cent of all live births occurred in hospitals, under attendance of a physician. Of the total, 3.2 per cent occurred in places other than hospitals but under attendance of a physician, and only .1 per cent unattended by a physician.

Connecticut, California, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, Utah and Washington were the other leading States.

The national average, Ewing said, was 84.8 per cent of live births in hospitals, 10.1 per cent attended by physician but not in a hospital, and 5.1 per cent born without attendance of a physician.

Since 1935, when comparable figures first became available, Ewing said, number of births delivered in hospitals has more than doubled.

In 1947 the recorded live births in the continental United States totaled 3,699,940, highest on record up to the end of that year.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

It Feels Good

Billy kicks up the warm dust with bare feet. Mary Anne picks a handful of alfalfa and runs the cool leafy stems through her fingers. Johnny and Susan, Deborah and Jack find all sorts of sensations in the simple things about them. The smell of honeysuckle, the "squashy" feel of a mud puddle, the drowsy hum of insects—all these are a part of the summer life of happy youngsters. Even in the city, there are sensory experiences that bring simple joys to children.

Sometimes we parents, forgetting our own childhood, become a little impatient with such activities. We tell Billy to stop kicking up dust, scold Mary Anne for getting her hands stained and in other ways step in and spoil the youngsters' fun. We can't see any value in these simple things. It's all just a nuisance.

Such experiences are a real part of growing boys' and girls' learning. The simple pleasures give a tang to everyday living that's worth while. With all the "duty" things there are to do, we should not begrudge our children or ourselves the satisfactions of these earthly experiences.

This Funny World

"You should have thought of that before"

TRY IT — A CANVAS SHELTER FOR A BACKYARD DEN

It is great fun to pick out a corner of your backyard and set up a den. Wild animals in the woods have a den, a place that they call home. A den for boys and girls can be made into a camp site, where you may "camp out" for the summer under canvas.

A simple tent can be stcetched over a framework made by placing a ridge pole in the crotch of two upright forked sticks. These forked sticks should be set a foot or so in the ground and placed as far apart as the canvas is wide. The canvas square is best if it is waterproofed and will turn rain, but you will be protected from the sun if an old the piece of used awning or a worn out blanket is used as covering.

Tie long ropes to the front corners of the shelter and short ones to the rear corners. Drive four stakes into the ground by each corner, and stretch your canvas over the ridge pole. Now you are ready to set up camp where you can eat picnic lunches, entertain your friends or do simple outdoor cooking.

TOMORROW—FOR SUMMER FUN, TURN SOMERSAULTS.

What's the Verdict?

"WOODMAN, SPARE . . ."

Q. X and Y were brothers who inherited a piece of country property, the will specifying that they were to hold as "tenants in common." The principal value of the tract lay in a grove of young walnut trees. If cut now, the trees would produce much less lumber than if cut in five years. At first they agreed to postpone cutting, but in a year X was hard up for cash and started lumbering operations over Y's objections. Y asks the court for an injunction to stop X's "waste" of the timber. Will it be granted?

A. As tenants in common of the real estate, X and Y have absolutely equal interest in every part of the property—in every tree on it. Theoretically, then, X has a right to prevent Y from cutting any trees, while Y has a right to cut them. The court in a case like this has resolved the difficulty by ordering Y to cut only half the timber, in value and in quantity. X therefore would get his injunction.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

The Friendly Touch

There is no feeling in this life . . . That I enjoy so much . . . As just to shake the hand of one . . . Who has that friendly touch . . . The one who smiles and says hello . . . Wherever we may meet . . . In happiness or sorrow and . . . In glory or defeat . . . Who is not ever jealous of . . . Another person's gain . . . And does not try to run and hide . . . Each time it looks like rain . . . There is no greater comfort and . . . No more enduring theme . . . Than just to know that someone else . . . Rejoices in my dream . . . That someone wishes me the best . . . Of health and wealth and such . . . And in so many other ways . . . Displays that friendly touch.

A Little Soft Soap Goes A Long Way

Mrs. John Persson of Bluemont, Va., says she certainly agrees with our sentiments on the subject of door-to-door salesmen who pretend that they're something else.

She writes that she doesn't mind buying from honest salesmen, who come straight to the point and offer items that she can use. It's the tricksters who draw Mrs. Persson's fire. They're making it tough for the legitimate salespeople.

For example, some time ago a fellow came to the door and announced that he had a free gift for the lady of the house—a box of soap powder.

"I just stood there, waiting for the gimmick," reports Mrs. Persson. "He held out the box, but I didn't take it—and he couldn't figure out what to do."

After a couple of embarrassing moments Mrs. Persson and the salesman got their signals straight. She accepted the sample box (and later found it to be a very good product) and the salesman explained:

"There have been so many gyp artists through this neighborhood lately that I'm having trouble giving things away. Everybody is suspicious of me."

MISCELLANY

Here's an unusual request: If you have any old, unused eyeglasses Mrs. Marcella Gwiazdzinska of 1518 N. 12th st., Arlington, Va., asks that you contact her (Chestnut 5096) so that she can arrange to pick them up. She says there's great need for old specs in a hospital and orphanage in Poland in which she's interested . . . Washington Post Carrier Boy Robert Lee of 5106 N. Carlin Spring rd., Arlington, Va., is making a big hit with his customers by distributing mimeographed letters suggesting that they call him up any time their Post isn't delivered on time . . . Mrs. LeRoy Hafer of 3411 Varnum st., Brentwood, Md., tells me that the Ladies Aid of the Trinity Lutheran Church will hold a lawn fete at the church school Thursday and Friday from 5 to 10 p. m., complete with plays, movies and pony rides . . . Jere Alexander of 1317 S. 28th st., Arlington, Va., is intrigued by the listing in the upper left-hand corner of page 74 of the local telephone book (white section) and asks, "Just what part of Betty is that?" . . . Audrey Hayden of 7241 Brinkley rd. se., reminds me that the exhibition by the Potomac Craftsmen will be at the National Museum (10th and Constitution ave. nw.) from its opening today until August 30 . . . Edward R. McIntosh of 9411 Seminole rd., Silver Spring, Md., wants to know how come "at first there were no roads into that tract of land, so Dixie Dugan had to explore it on horseback, but now all of a sudden they can drive in with a car and trailer?" . . . Yeah—and what's more, Ed, how come a guy who owns all that land works for a living as a soda jerk?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I haven't an extra radio I can give to replace the one stolen from the Home for Incurables, but maybe the enclosed check will help to buy one to replace it.

If other District Liners have already provided a radio, the Home can use the money as they see fit, to provide something for the enjoyment of their patients.

I'm afraid most of us forget there is such a place until an item like yours recalls it to our memory.

Charlotte Damron,
3685 38th st. nw.

Dear Charlotte:

Your generosity is twice welcome—first for the direct good your money will do in a worthy institution, and second for the reminder you have given us that others are dependent on our help. Thank you.

Bill.

THROUGH A FIELD OF REPUBLICANS?

Lilian Chase House of 4500 Edmunds st. nw. tells me that her maid reported for work the other morning with the news that she'd seen President Truman on the street, as the Chief Executive was returning to the Blair House after his morning walk.

"How'd he look?" asked Lilian.

"Real sturdy," was the matter of fact reply. "He looks like he'd enjoy a good day of plowing."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Hemisphere Colonies to Worry Us

By Drew Pearson

The Havana conference on colonial territories in the Western Hemisphere, which the United States decided to ignore, has taken some bold decisions that may give the State Department a sizable headache in the end.

Pearson

The meeting, attended by 14 Latin-American republics, was for the purpose of forcing Britain, France and Holland to give up their colonial holdings in the Western Hemisphere.

That should have limited the discussion to the British, Dutch and French Guianas, plus British Honduras. However, the Argentines got busy and persuaded the conferees also to consider their 120-year-old quarrel with Britain over the Falkland Islands.

A separate commission for the study of "dependent territories" was set up, under the chairmanship of Dr. Ernesto Dihigo, dean of the University of Havana Law School and one of Latin America's outstanding delegates to the San Francisco United Nations conference.

This distinguished authority on international law and his colleagues decided that Argentina's claim to the bleak islands, 500 miles from Buenos Aires in the South Atlantic, is completely valid. For good measure, the commission also agreed that the Argentines should have sovereignty over the south Georgia islands and several other antarctic areas disputed by Britain.

The significant point is that this decision, unanimously adopted by the delegates in plenary session, may be binding on the United States under the rule of the Pan American system. Although only 13 nations were present in Havana for the final voting—the fourteenth—Mexico, which had withdrawn after a clash of opinions over the British Honduras question—will probably adhere to the finding in the Argentine-British matter.

In this case, there is no doubt that the United States will be called upon formally to recognize and accept a stand ratified by two-thirds of the membership of the organization of American states, as provided in that body's statutes.

This will mean that the State Department's ill-advised effort to duck all responsibility in the question, by taking no part in the Havana deliberations, backfired badly. For it will be difficult to welsh on our commitments.

Secret Cocktail Lounge

The story has never been told how the Democrats discovered a secret cocktail lounge in the Capitol building after they took over from the Republicans.

The lounge was fixed up by former Senator Curly Brooks of Illinois and his political protege, former-sergeant-at-arms Edward McGinnis, in one of the historic rooms of the Capitol where the Supreme Court first met. They cleared out the stately, historic furnishings and turned it into a gay-colored cocktail lounge.

How much it cost the taxpayers to paint, decorate, and furnish Brooks' private lounge will probably never be known. It was simple for the former Senator from Illinois to keep his secret since he was chairman of the Senate Rules Committee and in charge of the Senate wing of the Capitol.

But when Brooks was defeated last November, Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona, the new rules chairman, inherited all his keys.

Telephoning Senator Scott Lucas, majority leader of the Senate, Hayden said: "I have a surprise for you."

Later he took Lucas to the hideaway, unlocked the door, and announced:

"Look what I have discovered! I don't want to get caught with a room like this on my hands, so I'm turning it over to you. It's only poetic justice that you should get it."

Truman's Long Memory

White-haired, 75-year-old Mamie Karst, mother of Missouri's Congressman Ray Karst, was one of the first political leaders in St. Louis to come out for Truman in 1934, when he was elected to the Senate. Calling at the White House with her Congressman son and family, she asked the President:

"Do you remember me?"

"Do I remember you!" exclaimed Truman, who hadn't seen her since 1934. "How could I ever forget you? If it hadn't been for you and a few other loyal supporters in St. Louis, I might not even have won the primary nomination. All the experts said that my primary opponent, Jack Cochran (late Representative John Cochran) had St. Louis all sewed up."

After a friendly visit, the President gave Karst's children, Mary Jane, 9, and Ronnie, 7, each a shiny, new ball-point pencil. But he admonished them: "Don't let any FBI men see you with these pencils. They might put you in jail."

Believing him, the saucer-eyed youngsters quickly hid the pencils. They were inscribed: "I swiped this from Harry S. Truman."
